

KANSAS AND TEXAS AGGIES IN FEATURE TILT

DROP KICKS.

The Tulane game was a disappointment in that the Farmers came off with the short end of the score, but an eye-opener for Aggie supporters in that it showed that Matty Bell really does have a real conference threat. In the opinion of most of the scribes, the Aggies should have won by two touchdowns. The famous Billy Banker was stopped cold and for the first time in his career was removed from the game. While the Aggies were watching for this blonde-headed star to perform some of his miracles, Armstrong swam around unmoled and using the breast stroke, floated a few extra points across the Aggie goal line. Two reasons why the Agies had no goal line punch were Boedenger and Dalrymple, star Greenie linemen.

And now we prepare for the Aggies of Kansas. The Kansas coach gave warning to all concerned that the Aggie game was his big game and meant to win it. The last this gentleman had anything to do with the Aggies was back in the days Centre was in the spotlight and Dana Bible's boys turned the lights off. Of course he was very appreciative, being an All-American quarter on the Praying Colonel team.

McMILLAN DETERMINED TO WIN.

Holding the center of the stage as the major intersectional gridiron clash of the week-end in the Southwest, the forthcoming meeting of Coach Matty Bell's Texas Aggies and Coach Bo McMillan's Kansas Aggies at Dallas, Saturday, October 12, promises to furnish Southwest grid fans one of the most spectacular displays of offensive tactics of the season. The game will be the sport feature of the opening day of the State Fair of Texas.

Reports from the recent game between the Kansas Aggies and Purdue indicate McMillan's charges may be expected to stage an offensive game replete with all the thrills that a dazzling aerial attack and a wide-open style of play can give. Likewise, as indicated by their play against the Tulane Greenies, Coach Bell's eleven is also expected to resort to open tactics with frequent use of the passing game. In consequence the Dallas game looms as one that will afford fans thrills in plenty. Added interest will attach to the game by reason of the fact that Bell and McMillan, the coaches, were former school and team mates, first in Fort Worth and then at Centre College.

Coach John Reid, who scouted the Kansas Aggie team Saturday, has brought back word that fans will likely see some sensational offensive football when McMillan brings his charges to Dallas, for in addition to his dazzling open tactics, which are used virtually throughout the games, the Kansas mentor has in his bag of football tricks a varied assortment of surprises.

41 TEAMS IN RACE FOR I. M. BASKETBALL TITLE

Monday afternoon four intramural basketball teams clashed in the first cage games for the mythical college basketball championship. This year promises to be the greatest intramural year in Aggieland's history because already 41 teams are entered for this one title, the largest number of teams ever to enter any event sponsored at this school. Now that the cap has been blasted off, four teams will be seen in action every afternoon for about 45 days on the Intramural and Varsity basketball floors. Interest is the highest in years; organization managers report enough men to form three and four teams in every company with

The Kansans, with Ray McMillan, nephew of the famous Bo, on the flinging end of the ball, have an aerial attack which netted them two touchdowns against their Big Ten opponents last Saturday and which promises to keep the Texas Aggie backs hustling all of the time they are on the defense in Dallas.

McMillan, besides being an accurate and easy passer, is a ball-toter of merit and was the kingpin of the Kansas offense last week. He will be aided by Nigro, Wildcat halfback, reputed to be a dangerous best broken field runner, and Wiggins, line plunging fullback, and ace of the Kansas backfield on the defense.

Saturday's game with Tulane is believed to have brought out the majority of the weaknesses on Coach Bell's eleven and with the roughness of early season playing smoothed to machine-like precision by intensive drill this week, it is likely the Texas Aggies also will have something new to offer the fans. A large portion of the practice periods this week will be spent in scrimmaging against Kansas formations in order to perfect pass defense for the tilt.

The Bellmen, who gained 199 yards on 13 passes last Saturday, will also give their opponents something to worry about along aerial lines. Zarafonitis, stellar Aggie fullback, is rapidly gaining the reputation of being one of the best pass tossers in the conference and all of his teammates in the backfield are leading him a merry chase in that department.

FISH TEAM SHOWS PROMISE.

The usual large contingent of high school football players attempting to widen their fame in collegiate pigskin circles, is cluttering up the Fish field in daily practices under Head Coach Roswell Higginbotham. Approximately one hundred Fish are out in uniform at the present time, while an equally large number are on the waiting list. However, Little Hig has begun to wield the pruning knife and the boys "just not quite good enough" are being cut to make room for those who have yet to receive their baptism of fire.

Although the freshmen material is not so promising as the 1928 team, there are several outstanding players who look like fine varsity

FOREIGN FIELDS

"I want my team to win every game on their schedule if possible, but if there is one game which I want my team to win above all others, it is the contest in Dallas, Texas, October 12, when we play the Texas Aggies." These words from the mouth of the famed Bo McMillan, coach of the Kansas Aggies. They are pointing for that Aggie tussle and are out to win. There will be a little personal rivalry connected with the game also. Matty Bell, Texas Aggie coach, played on the same sensational Centre College team of 1921 along with McMillan. The little college of 300 students cleaned a famous Harvard team that season, but were later defeated by the Texas Aggies.

Gentlemen they are really planning big things up in Fort Worth for the Cadets when they visit Cow Town on their annual corps trip. Barbecues, dances, free meal ticket and numerous other things are included in the entertainments for the visiting soldiers. A barbecue dinner for the entire Aggie student body will be served on the Frog campus preceding the game. You can lay a bet that every Aggie will be treated like a king in Fort Worth.

The Horned Frogs will be handicapped when they meet the Ags, for their line-smashing fullback, Austin Griffith, is out for a month with a fractured arm. He received the injury in their recent game with Daniel Baker. He will be replaced by
