Basketball practice has been limited this year on account of the large number of teams and the lack of sufficient playing space, but the Intramural department has done the best possible under the circumstances. Many good games are in store for intramural followers and students not playing are urged to help their teams by encouraging them to try just a little harder to bring home the basketball championship.

timber. Practically the only way to determine the ability of the boys at the present time is centered around the blocking and tackling skirmishes.

A new system has been inaugurated by the fish coaches this season. Two squads are being carried by the mentors. Twenty-seven of the most promising youngsters are placed on the first squad, while those not so well versed in the basic fundamentals of football, but showing promise, are members of the "Rag Knots." Those showing ability on the "Rag Knot" team are sent on up to the "varsity", while the first string players slowing down, are demoted.

There is weight to spare in the line material. Big, fast men are showing up well. There is a wealth of backfield material, in fact so much that the coaches are beginning to get worried as to how to dispose of about half of them.

The coaching staff is composed of very capable men this year. Roswell Higginbotham is beginning his third year as head coach. He has been turning out highly successful teams for the past three seasons. "Red" Petty, all-Southwestern conference end last season is directing the wing play for the season. Freddie "Bridget" Weston, diminutive varsity baseball star and former varsity football squad man, has been handling the linesmen. Frank Anderson, varsity track coach, and "Dutch" Dillingham, coach of the scrubs back in 1922 complete the staff of mentors.

AGGIES LOSE

Overton showed up well too, but were not in the game as well as the other boys. Tulane soon found that there was no gain through the Maroon line and began using the famous four-man interference around end.

The Aggies that made the trip were royally treated by the New Orleans' Aggies and nothing but praise can be said for them. They were at the train with cars, to take the cadets to any part of the city, and later conducted sight-seeing tours to the many interesting parts of the Crescent City.

The New Orleans newspapers entertained the visiting scribes from the time the train arrived until it departed. Only the score was wrong, but such a game as it was made the trip well worthwhile. Every man making the trip wished many times for the whole Corps. Dallas next stop.
