

AGGIE POWER.

Dorsey, Conover, Zarafonetis and Floyd—these four veterans of the Texas Aggie backfield are expected to figure prominently in the Aggies' offensive on the invasion of the T. C. U. Horned Frogs' lair at Fort Worth by Coach Matty Bell's charges next Saturday, October 19.

"Heebie" Dorsey, who only recently returned to the Aggie line-up after being out some time with a broken thumb injured early in the season, is not only a ball totter of merit but one of the outstanding passers of the conference as well. Last season his performance in the Aggie backfield led to his selection by several critics for an all-conference berth at half.

Brooks Conover, triple-threat man, is another fleet-footed half who is putting in a strong bid for all-conference honors. He is now near the head of the list of the Aggie ground gainers this season, being second to Captain Mills. Brooks has a 52-yard punting average.

George Zarafonetis, hard-plunging fullback and defensive end of the Aggies, is another triple-threat performer. Besides doing a large part of the passing, running and plunging of the Aggies, Zarafonetis has been bearing down a large part of the burden as a punter.

Bull Floyd, transferred from guard where he lettered last fall to half because of his speed and driving power, is considered by many critics as the strongest defensive back on the Aggie team. He is also a mainstay of the Aggie offense as an interference runner. It was partly due to his ability in this department last year that he was shifted to the backfield.

Conover and Dorsey will be playing against the Horned Frogs next Saturday for the last time during their college careers, as they will complete their eligibility with the Aggies this fall. Floyd and Zarafonetis are juniors.

about the Conference elevens since they have started their drive for the championship. Arkansas has several on the injured list and T. C. U. has one man laid up.

Certain writers keep telling of the easy schedule that the Aggies have for the year. The Aggies have just emerged from two very hard intersectional games and go into two tough conference battles.

S. M. U., in our opinion has the easy schedule. They were foresighted enough to schedule only one real intersectional game and two easy ones—and on Friday at that. Last week they played Austin College and this week they take on the S. M. U. Colts. No drill is necessary for any of these games and all their attention can be devoted to their next conference games. The game with Mississippi amounts to one with a team similar to Daniel Baker or some other T. I. A. A. conference school. Furthermore these games are played on Friday and the whole team sent to various games where conference elevens are playing. Are they scouting? Well yes. Before a play gets started well they should have it smothered. They may say that Matty Bell has the easiest schedule, but we have our doubts.

'28 team, is the only man who was lost through graduation. De Carlo and Akins, two bright prospects from last year's fish squad, failed to return, but I. C. Hahnand and M. Smith, two likely sophomore candidates are eligible this year. Perkins, who was lost to the team last year, on account of sickness is one of the best prospects of the season.

There will be a series of competitions to choose the members of the team. The men finished in the following order in the first competition held last Friday: Perkins, Winders, Smith, Michael, Griffis, Hahn and Green. Captain Shoemaker set the pace. There will be three more competitions in as many week ends, the choice of the team depending on the results of the competitions. On Nov. 8, a week after the selection of the team, a meet will be held with Texas here at College, the following week end the team will go to Houston to run in a preliminary meet with Rice. The conference meet will be held on November 23 in Houston this year.

game when Conover returned the kick-off 12 yards and then passed back to Mills who laid the ball on the Kansans' 37-yard line. A 22-yard pass to Alsabrook, 15-yard penalty, and a drive by Dansby gave the Aggies of Texas the first blood. The other two counters came as the result of a long heave to Varnell who scampered across the goal line and then Mills threw in another with a long run.
