A T. C. U. Co-Ed
Speaks.

This is an expression of opinion of a member of the T. C. U. student body received by the editor shortly after the corps trip to Fort Worth. The feeling seems to be fairly general; it is such things that tend to remove some of the sting of defeat.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Dear Senior, Junior, Sophomore and Freshman Aggies:

Who lost what game? Not you! Believe me, you played a wonderful game of sportsmanship that can not possibly be equalled. I like your genuine attitude in general. What could have been more impressive and attractive than your military discipline and your beautiful formation in the grandstand in perfect rhythm with your leaders? O Boy! If I could be privileged to shake the hand of every Aggie who participated in the big hit Saturday, I'd be willing to face any obstacle. Your grip and strength is invigorating. Your physical vigor is the substantial material basis for your "go-gettumm" spirit and your "keepum" smile of defeat shining before that strength of character and will power.

Physiology may teach its lessons, but psychology has had its effect and response. Here's to ya, Aggies, "American Heroes of our Generation of Youth," you're made out of the real stuff, and I like you for your spirit. You're grand losers, but glorious winners! I've learned my lesson from you, and you deserve praise. No doubt, every T. C. U. student is repeating a similar feeling in his heart for you. Keep the fires burning and the flying colors waving on top is the desire of a T. C. U. student.

SUNDAY INSPECTION

Sunday morning inspection, according to Lieutenant McCullough, has been revived from the dead past. Some ten or twelve years ago, this formation was a regular part of the military program just as it is now. It was referred to by the members of the enthusiastic corps as..... "S. M. I." and listed by the cadets in the same category as drill, toothache and one's "fish year."

Despite this, the lieutenant is certain that the boys will appreciate this opportunity to inspect the military staff each Sunday morning, and that in so far as he could see, the only one suffering as a result of the new regulation is Mr. Duncan. And that, we believe, is a happy thought.

The skeletons of two monster animals, a diplodocus and a brontosaurus, believed to have lived in this country 80,000,000 years ago in the Jurassic period, have been discovered in this vicinity by Barnum Brown, curator of fossils and reptiles at the American Museum of Natural History at New York.

Brown is planning to return here with an expedition in the near future to dig the valuable bones out of the sandstone rock in which they have been preserved for these ages. It is estimated that the work will require two months.

What's Wrong With Me He Wondered

The sad story of one who was not «aware». Some day a sweetie will tell him what the little birdie said to the Congressman about life; then he will sport a Braeburn and be a changed young man.

Meantime he will just sit and think — mostly sit, we think.
