the burns on his hands though those in his shirt are expected to rankle his conscience for some time, and the lustre of his locks has been permanently destroyed. No insurance was carried on the rug, L. W. Johnston, the editor-in-chief, and Lester Hanks, business manager, informed the reporters after the fire had been extinguished beneath the heroic feet of Joe Sosolik, campus photographer.

The cover for the February issue of The Countryman is a view of the Academic Building of the A. and M. College. Articles in the issue are entirely agricultural topics and were written by members of the faculty, heads of departments and members of the extension service and experiment station staffs as well as by students of the College.

The Battalion takes this opportunity to congratulate the staff of The Countryman and others who have worked to make the first issue a success which will surpass even the dreams of the most ardent boosters.

A Confidential
Letter to a Friend

Dear Pete:
I pause for a few moments from a contemplation of a treatise on the effective growth of current in circuits of negative temperature coefficient of resistance to tell you a story of the strangest thing that ever happened to a man.
The other night as I was studying the radiation of the electric theory, a sudden pain struck me and I fell to the floor in a cycloidal fit. The old lady sent a rush call for the Doc, and in the meantime took the proper steps to inoculate me against the old and new

Yesterday the natural course of telephone expansion was to penetrate the nation's frontiers, building new lines and adding new subscribers.

Today finds many new "frontiers" for telephone expansion — among them the homes of present subscribers. Upstairs and downstairs, wherever needed, additional telephones are being installed. People are learning that there is added utility in convenient communication.

This new field of activity was conceived by commercial development men of the Bell System. Just another example of forward planning to make telephone service more valuable.
