MOORE ANNOUNCES LONGHORN PLANS

"The finished Longhorn will be just what the student body helps us make it," said Edwin Moore, editor of the 1931 yearbook when questioned about the policy of the future publication.

"With a busy spring and summer behind it, the Longhorn is preparing to enter its rush period. The ensuing three months will practically tell the story for both the financial and editorial ends of the undertaking. Though the year is not what one might call a prosperous year, prospects are none the less encouraging. If the old summons for cooperation brings the desired response, and if the customary support is tendered, the Longhorn believes that it can make itself worthy of the corps' consideration. At a later date, perhaps we shall bid for that corps enthusiasm as well.

As perhaps has been recognized,

NEW SCHOOL SONG FEATURED COLLEGE NIGHT CEREMONIES

"There Shall Be No Regrets", new A and M song written by Curtis Vinson, director of publicity at the A and M College, and with music composed by R. J. Dunn, director of the A and M band, featured the annual College Night program on the steps of the Y. M. C. A. Friday night.

College night has long been a tradition at A and M marking the opening of the regular nightly yell iron season and is always held on the first Friday of the fall term of school.

Speakers on the program were President T. O. Walton, Dean E. J. Kyle, Colonel Chas. J. Nelson, Line Coach Klepto Holmes and Track Coach Frank Anderson. Matty Bell, Aggie grid mentor was out of town and his message to the corps was read by Fred Buford, chief of the yell staff and chairman of the College Night ceremonies.

Members of the A and M football team who spoke were Captain J. G. Floyd, Adrian Tracy and Roscoe Van Zandt, all seniors who are in their last year of gridiron competition. Remaining lettermen were introduced by Buford.

"There Shall Be No Regrets" was written by Mr. Vinson carrying out the war cry of the Aggie triumph over the Texas Longhorns on Kyle Field in 1925. Considered the underdogs in the contest, the A and M team went into the game with the motto, "There Shall Be No Regrets" firmly engraved in their minds and at the final whistle the score stood 28-0 in their favor.

The title of the song was announced by Buford as a motto for the year at the College Night ceremony, and plans are being made to feature it for the A and M-Nebraska inter-sectional tilt at Lincoln October 4.

FIRST CORPS HOP SATURDAY NIGHT

A new Aggieland orchestra under the direction of Don Giffen will furnish the music for the first corps dance of the current college year in the Mess Hall Annex Saturday night, September 27.

This year the band will have ten members with several new names on the roster to replace those lost through graduation. Frank Molina, freshman from Brenham, will play second trumpet. Gordon Steinhoff, an exceptionally good trombonist will replace L. M. Gandy who graduated last June.

Podge Reed succeeds Pete Baughn at the piano, while Ed Bassett and Bob Heatt are back in their old places. Newton Hielscher, bass, and William Machmehl, tenor saxophone, are the other new comers to the band.

The orchestra has been practicing nightly since the opening of school and good music is assured at the dance Saturday night. The melee will begin at nine o'clock. Script will be $1.00.

HAYS SELECTED FOR VICE-PRESIDENCY WITH N. G. SCHUESSLER SECRETARY-TREASURER

DR. WALTON MAKES WELCOME ADDRESS

Formation of right habits of thinking and conduct, recognition of the rights of others and the determination to make the best of opportunities afforded were stressed by President T. O. Walton in his formal address of welcome to the students of the A & M College Friday morning in Guion Hall.

"To be a good citizen one must first be a good man and one cannot be a good man unless the impulse to do right becomes a habit so firmly fixed that it is acted upon automatically," Dr. Walton said. "I hope that every student who has entered the college this year has come here with the intention of forming these right habits and the determination to improve himself steadily by making the most of advantages and opportunities offered him."

Dr. Walton laid stress upon the influences of one student over his fellows and upon the responsibility of each student to his fellow students and to his college, pointing out that it is only through setting the right example that any improvements can be wrought in the student body or in the college. He also stressed the desirability of frequent use of the new Cushing Library.
