THE BATTALION

Another Drink

He drank a toast to her eyes
so blue,

He drank a toast to her red lips too,

He drank a toast to her flowing hair,

He drank again and didn't care.

He drank a toast to all his friends,

And he could drink with the best of men;

He drank once more and heaved a sigh,

Then one more snort and he was high.

He drank a toast to his dear old school,

He drank to his old lady too;
He drank again and our heart sunk,

For that last drink had made him drunk.

He took a drink to future days,
He drank a toast to ancient ways,

He gulped one more for days of old

Then the drunken sot, he passed out cold.

—Skipper.

So your name it Tim Riley,
Any relation to Jim Riley?

Very distantly; I was the first child and he was the eighteenth.

—Purple Parrot.

They had to carry Carrie to the ferry;

The ferry carried Carrie to the shore;

The reason that they had to carry Carrie,

Was that Carrie couldn't carry any more.

—Punch Bowl.
