Homecoming!

Drunks—Collegians busy proving they are worthy of the name—silly speeches by sentimental old-grads—which no one listens to—shocked old ladies—fights—broken whisky bottles and spilt whisky—drunks—asinine old men shining like lights—headlights—spotlights—affected girls posing and bidding for the admiration of the crowd—drunks—thousands cheering a football game which few are sober enough to see—cops ejecting drunken students who promptly return through another entrance—men who never clenched a fist screaming "yellow" at bruised and battered boys who happen to be on the other side—the dance after the game which is worse than the game as only 22 played there—singing—drunks—more drunks—oh, hell, homecoming comes only once a year—Thank God!

—Rammer-Jammer.

Guess I'll be a fireman.

Oh, yeah?

Uh, huh! I've already jumped out of three windows this week.

—Red Cat.

Phooney—Are you a statistician?

Mooney—Well, I raise rabbits.

—Wampus.

First she's in your thoughts a lot,

She has many charms;

Soon she's in your motor car;

Then she's in your arms.

Then she's in your family;

Oh, a lackaday!

Then, of course, for evermore

She is in your way.

—Punch Bowl.
