

You have a handsome husband, dearie.

Yeah, but you should have seen the one that got away.

—Red Cat.

'34

Hubby (at 3 a. m.)—It's a great wife if she doesn't awaken.

—Puppet.

'34

Mother, will college boys get to heaven?

Yes, sonny, but they won't like it.

—Skipper.

'34

He—Do you know the difference between a taxi and a subway car?

She—No.

He—Fine, we'll take the subway.

—Pointer.

'34

Student—That girl that just passed us lives next door and you didn't even tip your hat.

2nd Student—Gee, I didn't recognize her when she was dressed.

—Rammer-Jammer.

'34

Employee—Why did you leave your last place?

Young Lady—I was caught kissing my boss, sir.

Employee—Ur-rum, you can start here in the morning.

—Rammer-Jammer.

College Humor's ALL-AMERICANS

Basketball AND Hockey

IN THE MAY ISSUE

College Humor was the first publication to attempt a selection of honor teams in inter-collegiate basketball and hockey. And today College Humor's selections of All-American stars in these two sports are recognized as official and authentic.

No other national magazine has undertaken to scrutinize the hundreds of college quintets in search of the five or ten most accomplished and consistently brilliant performers . . . or has endeavored a study of the different hockey conferences.

The counsel of college coaches the country over has been employed by Les Gage, Sports Editor, to assure an impartial and complete treatment of the subject. The May issue of College Humor, on sale the first of April, will announce the All-American cage team and hockey sextet for 1931 in conjunction with two comprehensive stories by Les Gage.
