THE BATTALION

Should have seen the girl I spent last night with!
 Was she nice?
 Nice? Boy, she was a dream!

—Lord Jeff.

Are you looking at my knee?
 No, dear; I'm above that.

—Frigol.

"You have been disrespectful to your superiors; you have played when you should have been working; you have disorganized every department in which you have been placed. You need discipline," said the banker to his son, "and I'm going to see that you get it."

"No, Father, not that," cried the son. "Please don't do that. Please give me one more chance. I'll turn over a new leaf. Please, Father, don't make me a vice-president."

—Exchange.
