"I've never met a girl like you before!"

"Your eyes remind me of two glowing stars."

"It's so easy to pay a girl compliments when everything nice a fellow can say is true."

"Don't let your lips get too near mine—I'm only human you know."

"I used to dream there was a girl like you somewhere, but I never thought I'd really find her."

"Your voice is as soft music!"

"You wonderful, wonderful girl!"

"Look heah, black boy, that ain't corn licker in that bottle, that's pluto water. You ain't gonna drink that, is you?"

"I ain't gonna do nothin' else."

"Oh, yes you is, too."

Ace—"See that lady in the third seat of the fourth row?"

Deuce—"Well, what about her?"

Ace—"She's a payroll bandit."

Deuce—"How do you know?"

Ace—"I married her."

"Oh, Virgil, you shouldn't do that! Suppose someone should come in and see you!"

"Do you let Jack hold your hand while you're out driving?"

"No, I have to hold his."

"Did you ever hear the one about the Scotchman who asked how much it would cost to store his bed room suite and after being told ten dollars, asked if he could sleep in it?"

"No, you must tell it to me sometime."

"She sure did give you a dirty look."

"Who?"

"Mother Nature."

"You shouldn't criticize mothers-in-law. They go a long way to make homes happy."

"Yes, but they don't seem to realize, that the farther away the better."

"I heard that you and Roy were going to be married."

"Maybe, but we still have hopes."

Diner: "I ordered chicken, waiter, and there is nothing here but skin and bones."

Waiter: "Pardon me, sir, just one moment and I'll get you the feathers, too."

Speaker: My voice sure fills the hall tonight.

Yawner: Yes, I noticed several people leaving to give it more room.

There's a story about a man who was working night and day, and when questioned as to the cause of his industry informed the questioner that he had been fined fifty dollars for beating up his mother-in-law.

"I see," said the inquisitive one. "You are working to pay the fine."

"No, to make another fifty dollars, so I can beat the old girl again."

She: "Did you ever kiss a girl before?"

He: "Sure, I always do."
