Sport Sidelights

By W. J. Faulk

The seasons are ended but the memories linger unto eternity, as the final page is turned on Aggie sports for the 1931-32 session. Post mortems may be in order but the fact remains that the games have been played, and are now listed as history.

Championships were lacking in the past nine months, but a review of all varsity sports reveals that although the going at times was rough, the Aggies at length emerged with better than a 500 percentage for the year's work. Four of Aggie's "fightingest" captains have donned their togs for the last time as college athletes, and are listed with those of former years who although they were sometimes faced with certain defeat, the odds against them overwhelming, their spirit and fight never waned.

Captain Carl Moulden, the Cisco boy, who was known as the fighting captain of the "Fighting Aggies," started the year off in grand style when he lead the Maroon and White grid machine through its most successful season in four years.

Followed by Charlie Beard, the diminutive lad who hails from "Cowntown," the same spirit was consistently displayed on the Hardwoods, and again an Aggie leader was dubbed the "scrappingest of the scrappers."

Then came the baseball race and Captain Lester "Squawk" Veltman, San Antonio's contribution, who proved another sterling pilot who never failed to give his best that his team might win.

Last but not least is Percy Mims, who also calls Ft. Worth home. Too much cannot be said of the efforts expended by Captain Percy and his men on the cinder paths and in the field events. Rated at the start of the season as competition for only the cellar candidates in the race for track honors, hours and hours of continuous preparation were rewarded, in a manner, when they rose to be contenders for the crown in the conference meet, beaten only by Rice and Texas.

Before we close this rambling bull there is one suggestion we would like to make, and it is felt that this suggestion will be wholly in order. Previous to the conference meet there was much talk of sending "Honk" Irwin to the National Intercollegiate meet in Chicago, in June. "Honk" was expected to win easily over the field at the meet, but fate decreed otherwise and he failed. That is no reason that he cannot redeem himself and we are thoroughly confident that he will if sent to the meet, and probably will win a trip to the Olympic tryouts. He has proven that he can put the shot far past the conference record and it is very doubtless that he cannot still do so.

Each year there is a growing indifference among students to fail to pay the student activities fee. The trouble is most conspicuous in the upper classes than among freshman students and sophomores. And the sad part of it all is the fact that the greatest deficit seems to lie in the senior class.

Is it true that students of this institution have failed to care whether they are present at athletic events on Kyle field? Certainly if those who refuse to pay this fee would stop and think the matter over, it is entirely probable that they would see it from a different angle.

For fifteen dollars the student is admitted to 32 athletic contests on Kyle field, the Longhorn, yearbook, and the Battalion, weekly newspaper and monthly comic magazine are also included.

Each of these items figured separately would far surmount that total of fifteen dollars by approximately an equal sum. So why not pay the activity fee? Think it over during the summer months and be sure you fall in with the underclassmen in paying student activity fees.
