Another Wheeler and Woolsey comedy giving the reel version of how a Geneva peace conference is carried on. These two "Diplomaniacs" turn a peace conference into a necking party, but their efforts are unappreciated and they end by joining the army to see the world. Whether you like it or not will depend on whether you like that type of comedy, however believe it or not—most of the gags are new. Cast: Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, and Marjorie White.

"I Cover the Waterfront" is a realistic smuggling picture featuring the posthumous action of Ernest Torrence, who died two weeks ago. The plot is melodramatic, but well suited to the histrionic talents of the actors. A young re-

Dent And Bogevoid Finish Work On Battalion Staff With Graduation

Dent

Selection of Trygve Bogevoid, Waco, as business manager was thoroughly justified by the fact that, despite unfavorable economic conditions, The Battalion has enjoyed one of its most successful years.

Both Dent and Bogevoid will receive B. S. Degrees in structural architecture at the commencement exercises to be held Saturday.

porter solves a crime that is baffling the police and falls in love with the smuggler's daughter. The reason that young reporters in plays always solve crimes that baffle the police is because young reporters and not policemen generally write plays.

Cast: Claudette Colbert, Ben Lyon, and Ernest Torrence.

As a fish story, "Below the Sea" is hard to beat. Its plot is a combination between "Treasure Island" and "Toilers of the Sea" and contains enough fast action to even satisfy an A. & M. cadet corps. One of the chief actors is an eighteen foot octopus which stages a losing fight with the hero, who happens to be a deep-sea diver.

Cast: Ralph Bellamy, Fay Wray, Frederik Vogeding, and Esther Howard.

"Ladies of the Jury" is the comic story of a typical mixed jury of men and women who can only agree to disagree. Edna Mae Oliver plays the leading role, and receives plenty of backing from Roscoe Ates (the stuttering comedian in "Cimarron") and Ken Murray (Radio-Vaudeville favorite). It is not a slapstick comedy.

With the May 24 issue of The Battalion, G. Marshall Dent, Texas City, ended his career as editor of that student publication. Dent is to be commended for his excellent work throughout the entire year and for his enviable record of having The Battalion ready for distribution each Wednesday of thirty-four consecutive weeks. The inauguration of two new columns, "Idle Rumors" and "Campus Personalities", added much to the paper's popularity.

Bogevoid, Waco, as business manager was thoroughly justified by the fact that, despite unfavorable economic conditions, The Battalion has enjoyed one of its most successful years.

Lionel Barrymore does one of his usual superb jobs of acting in another "Roosevelt good-will" type of picture entitled "Looking Forward". The plot is concerned with the fate of an old-fashioned department store at the time of the depression, with the show ending with the usual prophecy of good times just around the corner. The acting is truly marvelous in its portrayal of character. The foreword was written by President Roosevelt—"We need enthusiasm, imagination, and the ability to face the facts—we need the courage of the young." Students planning to stay over for summer school should be "looking forward" to seeing this show.

Cast: Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone, Elizabeth Allan, Phillips Holmes, and Colin Clive.

1276 Students Take Part In Intramural Sports During Year

Results of the years intramural activities were announced last Thursday night at a banquet held in honor of the intramural managers.

After a final checkup it was found that there were 1276 men who took part in the various intramural sports this year compared to 1302 who took part last year. This was a decrease of 26, which in view of the smaller enrollment in school this year, is not surprising. The total participation for the year was 4101 against 3451 for last year, an increase of 650, showing that the men who did take part widened their sphere of activity and entered several of the sports offered on the intramural program.

The gold medal for individual honors for the year went to L. C. Roots, Co. C Eng., of Denison who amassed a total of 247 points. Second place honors went to W. D. Sorrels, F. Art., of Tyler. Third place was taken by L. A. Shone, F. Art., of Houston.

Bat. E. Art. won the award for the least number of forfeitures during the year. For this, J. B. Heinen, who managed Bat. E. will receive a fountain pen and pencil set.

Co. C. Eng. won the award for the highest percentage of partici-
