Waitress: "Spoon?"

Customer: "Sometimes. Do you?"

Men in session after dinner.

1st M: "And I tell you, I've kissed the girls at Vassar, kissed the ladies at Bryn Mawr, kissed the university beauty queens, but I've yet to get greater enjoyment than when I kiss my own wife."

2nd M (enthusiastically): "By George, you're right!"

Painful silence.

—Exchange

A man pinned under his car after an accident was being questioned by a policeman:

"Married?"

"No," said the man, "This is the worst fix I was ever in."

—Log

"Men," he cried, "there is an announcement I want to make. Last night my wife presented me with a son."

The men broke ranks, cheered, threw their hats in the air, and general pandemonium reigned for nearly five minutes. When order had been restored, the Colonel, pleased with the enthusiastic reception of his announcement and the congratulations, indicated that he had another announcement:

"Men and officers," he said, clearing his throat, "I thank you."

—Bored Walk

It seems there was some argument about naming the new dam out west after Hoover. The trouble was that they couldn't decide whether or not Hoover was worth a dam.

—Longhorn

Flapper: "Do you practice what you preach?"

New Rector: "Certainly, my dear."

Flapper: "Ooooooh! Goody! I heard you preach about sin."

—Temple Owl

"My husband is a deceitful wretch."

"What's he done now?"

"He pretended to believe me last night when he knew I was lying to him."
