

MORE ADVICE—

(Continued from page 7)

course, and I haven't studied it. Read Ruskin last year when I should have been studying my mechanics.

Graduate! Heigh-ho. I wonder how long I can live without getting a job.

Joe Gud wasn't necessarily an unthinking student. He studied as long as he thought he was on the right track. But he stuck himself in engineering, and though he didn't fit, he couldn't pull himself out.

The incoming freshman will do well to resolve to make this, his first year in college, a period of extreme alertness and observation. With the view not only of mastering his subjects thoroughly, but also of determining the extent of his inherent talent for his chosen type of work, he should study religiously and comprehensively. If he starts his first term in engineering, he should ask himself this question many times during the year: "Am I suited to engineering better than I am to other vocations?" If his major is liberal arts, agriculture, pre-med or what-not, he should ask himself comparable questions, directed to ascertain for himself whether he is travelling the right academic road.

Let him find his mistake, if he makes one, during the first nine months of his college career—not when he is a junior or a senior, when he will have been too late!

* * * * *

HOMESICK?

Some of you freshmen, within, may already be recalling to mind your parents with a little wish that you could see them. You may, even at this early date, have run into some problem, the solving of which you would like for your mother or father to do.

If the feeling grows on you, and the problem you now face is supplanted by a multiplicity of others, we offer advice that, if taken, will reduce your homesickness to a minimum:

There is a lady on this campus, who, though she doesn't know it, has been "Mother" to more Aggies than anyone else at College Station. She's a wife, a relief worker, and a real mother, carrying all the responsibilities customarily attached to each position, yet, despite the sum total of such a tremendous load, she's ready to advise, "mother", or entertain any Aggie (especially freshmen).

If you get homesick, the "blues", or if you get stumped on anything, this lady is the person for you to see. She'll even introduce you to that girl you've been admiring. And, if you haven't seen a girl you like, why, she'll find one for you.

If you would like to meet this lady, come to 64 Mitchell Hall. This is no joke, and no myth. If you want advice, let us take you to her.

FROM KYLE FIELD—

(Continued from page 18)

of service this year. Coach Norton highly respects the ability of the rugged Abilene lad, whose showing in these early workouts has been encouraging to all Aggie Coaches. Selmer Kirby, two-hundred-pound sophomore who hails from Amarillo, has been performing excellently in practice and makes the hopes of regular starters at the tackle position look more complicated all the time. Grady Godwin, who lettered last year at tackle, but whose specialty is kicking goals, is being counted on to make extra points with his educated toe this year.

The wing positions are likely to cause the Aggie coaching staff considerable work before they uncover some capable ends to fortify the pots left by Ray Murray and Pete Robinson last year. Bob Connelley, letterman in 1932 is the only "T" man seeking the berth. Allen Goldsmith, halfback from Port Arthur, has been shifted to the end position in an attempt to strengthen the weakness. Besides being short of good ends the injury jinx has already invaded the Aggie camp. Pete Dowling, Houston sophomore, and one of the most promising candidates for end, broke his leg in one of the practice sessions Wednesday and his services will be lost to the team for the remainder of the season. Charley Rollins, squadman from Gulfport, Mississippi, and Taylor Wilkins, squadman from Franklin, appear to be holding the inside track, while Max Tohline and Bill Stages are hustling for a chance.

The backfield boasts a group of speedy, hustling men who have possibilities of springing many surprises in the Southwest Conference this season. Wilbert Randow, Odell Fowler, and Bill Couser are fast and good punters. "Grandpa" Gregory, fullback from Tyler, has plenty of driving power and is a good defensive man. Gregory is being groomed to general the Aggies on the field. Reese Newsome, Les Cummings, Nash Thompson, and Jack Walker form a group that take their turns in the backfield with the first four mentioned, while Bill Kimbrough, Doc Pitner, Sid Martin, Jack Stringfellow, Frank Merka, and Paul Callahan alternate the backs as they are needed. Of these players Gregory, Fowler, Couser, Kimbrough, and Stringfellow are lettermen. Randow, Reid, Thompson, Martin, and Callahan are squadmen. Cummings, Newsome, Pitner, Walker, and Merka are sophomores.

The Maroon clad Aggies who don their satin togs Saturday afternoon against the Sam Houston State Teachers College on Kyle Field are expected to round into fair shape as they take the field for the first time under their new coaching staff. Every Cadet enrolled here should be on hand in the Aggie cheering section Saturday to give Coaches Homer H. Norton and Cal Hubbard a great ovation as they take their first great step in restoring prestige at Aggieland.