The Chemist Analyzes a Woman

Element—Woman.

Occurrence—Found wherever man exists. Seldom in the free state, with few exceptions in the combined state.

Physical Properties—All colors, sizes, shapes and ages. Usually in a disguised condition. Face covered with a film of composite material. Boo-hoos at nothing and may freeze at any moment; however, melts when properly treated. Very bitter if not well used.

Chemical Properties—Very active, possesses a great affinity for gold, silver, platinum, precious stones, or anything of value. Violent reactions when left alone. Undissolved by liquids, but actively stimulated when treated with spirits solution. Sometimes yields to pressure. Turns green when placed beside a more handsome specimen. Ages very rapidly, usually getting into permanently enlarged state. Fresh variety has great magnetic attraction.

Caution—Highly explosive when in inexperienced hands.

—Yellow Jacket.

Frosh: "I was out with a nurse last night."

Co-ed: "Cheer up. Maybe your mother will let you go out without one sometime."

— She had just received a beautiful skunk coat from her husband.

"I can't see how such wonderful furs come from such a foul-smelling beast."

"I don't ask for thanks, dear," said her husband, "but I really insist on respect."

—Drexel.

Drunk— Believe it or not, offisher, I'm hunting for a parkin' plash.

Officer— But you haven't an automobile.

Drunk— Yesh, I have. It's in the parkin' plash I'm looking for.

—Black and Blue Jay.

During the Christmas examinations, a questions in one of the courses was "What causes a depression?" One of the students on pro wrot "God knows, I don't. Merry Christmas".

When the Examination paper came back he found the professor's notation, "God gets 100, you get zero. Happy New Year."

—Rice Owl
