For dinner when it is necessary to dress, we suggest a one-button single breasted peaked lapel dinner jacket with dull silk grosgrain facing, a narrow bosom starched plain linen dress shirt with two studs, a white winged collar of medium height with large tabs, a backless white single breasted pique waistcoat.

We find this sort of get-up being worn at other colleges: Covert colored hat, with tapered crown and black band; brown herringbone tweed topcoat, with stitched cuffs, fly-front and outside ticket pocket; Saxony gun club check suit; light tan shirt, black rep tie with yellow stripes; brown calf shoes with crepe soles and heels; capeskin gloves.

Cooler weather: Harris tweed balmacaan with wool muffler and covert colored hat with black band.

Campus and general country wear: a three-button notch lapel Shetland jacket of brown hound's tooth check pattern, cut on easy fitting lines, and made with patch pockets; natural shoulders and center vent, grey flannel slacks, blue Oxford shirt with round collar attached, striped rep tie, white cashmere sleeveless pullover, one-piece top cap of black and white Shepherd check.

The week-endist who likes to be super-correct: Navy blue worsted suit with white broadcloth shirt and a starched collar. Shepherd checked tie and bowler hat.
