

WELCOME TO AGGIE EXES

To the many Aggie ex-students who are on the campus this weekend, The Battalion extends a hearty welcome on behalf of the student body of the college.

With an official homecoming this year, exes have pretty generally agreed that this is the logical time for it and we are glad they have chosen this weekend.

The school has changed a lot—that will, of course, be the first observation. We hope, however, that they will find the change for the better.

Again we extend our greeting and express the hope that their visit to A. & M. now brings them a lot of memories, a lot of renewed acquaintances, and on top of all, a whale-va good time.

TOLERATE THE STUDENT

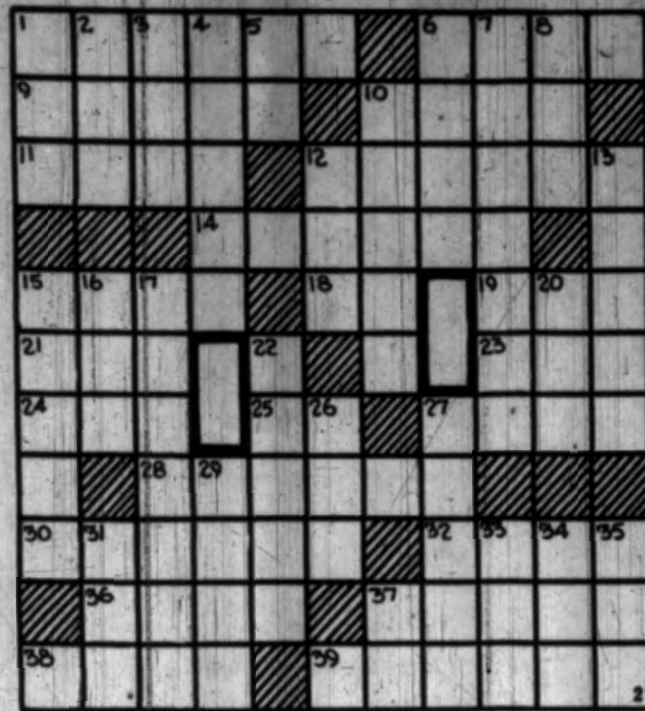

The American student has, in a manner of speaking, become inured to tales of racial prejudice and intolerance in European countries. Reports of violence in Germany have been noticed, but a study of conditions will show that there is just as much intolerance in smaller nations, such as Hungary, Rumania, and Poland. Hardened though he may be, one must still pay attention to stories telling of mistreatment of Jewish students at universities in these countries.

Thousands of Jewish students have been forced to leave the countries named above to seek instruction in more tolerant nations. Those who, for some reason or other, have had to remain, have experienced great difficulty in being admitted to universities, and even more difficulty in pursuing their studies once they have gained entrance. Their fellow students, aroused by anti-Jewish propaganda and policies in central and eastern Europe, have carried on terrorist campaigns in the universities.

Jewish students have had the most difficult time in Poland. Traditional academic tolerance has been no protection, brutal attacks occurring as frequently in the ancient academies of Cracow and Vilna as in the more modern universities at Warsaw and Lemberg. Persecutors have demanded that the Jews be segregated and placed on certain benches in the lecture rooms. Professors have been powerless to stop the beatings and attacks, which have occurred in the classrooms themselves. The Polish government has been lax in correcting the situation and has taken no action which will definitely protect Jewish students.

The story is much the same in Rumania, where the influence of the Rumanian Nazis has been strong. Jewish women, as well as men have been cruelly beaten, and one professor was seriously harmed because he objected to the persecution.

In Hungary, the anti-Semitic students presented a petition to the government asking that Jews be barred from public schools and that they be segregated from national cultural life. Refused, they turned 11:00 a. m., Morning prayer and sermon by the Rev. Gordon Reese of Houston.

Visitors are always welcome to attend the services at St. Thomas' Chapel, and you are extended a special invitation to hear the Rev. Mr. Reese this Sunday at the 11 o'clock service.

THE A. & M. CHURCH OF CHRIST

R. B. Sweet, Minister
Schedule of Service: Sunday 10 a. m. Bible classes, worship and sermon; 7 p. m. evening worship; Wednesday 7 p. m. prayer meeting.
We do not have a large number of services, but are concentrating upon these three, to make them really worthwhile to every one of you. Each service is comparatively short, moves right along and does not grow tiresome. Every student should be able to take enough time from his studies and other activities to worship three times a week.
Come Sunday morning at 10 o'clock and bring a friend.

At the first monthly meeting of the A. & M. ex-4-H Club Members Association Monday night the discussion centered around the plans of the association for the 1938-1939 school session.

Subsequent meetings will consist of talks by faculty members or men from the Extension Service who will discuss topics relating to agriculture, thus keeping the members in contact with the latest developments in the agricultural field.

The next meeting of the club will be held November 3.
U. C. Hopmann heads the association for this year.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

BY DR. R. P. LUDLUM

One of the most intriguing things in politics is the relation between purposes and the means of realizing them, together with the associated question of the effect the means have upon the ends. This country is large, and the machinery of its political organizations is complicated. The gap between the ideal and the translation of it into practice, therefore, is often laughably wide.

Some of the present actions of the New Deal constitute a case in point. Mr. Roosevelt seems convinced of the desirability of separating the voters into two new parties, one liberal and one conservative, to replace the Republican and Democratic parties as they are constituted now. There is much common sense in the idea.

Each of the parties, at present, has within its membership people whose ideas range from the radical or extremely liberal to the deeply conservative or reactionary. In other words, each party has what has come to be called a "Left" wing and a "Right" wing. The parties divide the country, so to speak, along horizontal lines. Thus the Democratic party has such widely differing members (reading from left to right) as Maury Maverick, Harry Hopkins, Senator Schwelb, Governor Lehman, Bernard Baruch, John N. Garner, Al Smith, and Frank Hague. The Republican party, similarly, includes F. H. LaGuardia, the LaFollettes (until recently, at least), Senator Vandenberg, Alf Landon, Herbert Hoover, Nicholas Murray Butler, and Frank Gannett. It would be hard to find men whose principles contrast more sharply than, say, Maury Maverick and Frank Hague, or F. H. LaGuardia and Frank Gannett. The President's purpose, his policy, his idea, is to discard this horizontal division and to set up in its place a vertical division. Maury Maverick and LaGuardia, Harry Hopkins and the LaFollettes, if the new division were effected, would belong to one new party, and Frank Hague and Frank Gannett, Al Smith and Nicholas Murray Butler, would belong to the other. The new alignment certainly would be more realistic. Men whose ideas were of one type would be in one party, and men whose ideas were of the opposing type would be in the other.

The ideal sounds sensible. But how is it to be put into effect? As a matter of practical politics, Mr. Roosevelt needs to control whatever political convention he intends (Continued on page 7) pretty darn unsatisfactory to quite a few people. I will be only too happy to apologize for this missile of discontent if and when a satisfactory explanation of this situation is forthcoming—providing the situation proves to be unavoidable. Sincerely, Rex Golston, a senior.

to violence on the campuses to achieve their ends.
The persecution of Jews must be regarded with special alarm when it reaches schools and universities, for here is the last refuge of tolerance. The dismissal and exile of professors and the violence done students bode an unhappy future for Jews in those countries, for attitudes of intolerance developed in the students of today will persist for generations to come.—California Daily Bruin.

Senior Deplores Ticket Situation

JUST A CURIOSITY

I'm only a senior at this institute of higher learning and it seems a shame that I'm looking forward to graduating this June without the knowledge of how our Athletic Department operates in one respect: namely, that of dispensing with tickets for the annual Aggie football game with the Texas Longhorns. And in seeking this knowledge, I sincerely believe that not only the rest of the senior class, but juniors, sophomores, and freshmen as well, will be interested in furthering their education to that extent.
It seems downright unfair to each and every student of A. and M. that after supporting a team all season—win, lose, or draw—he can't even get a ticket for a seat somewhere outside of the ten yard stripe. And that on the very first day the tickets go on sale up here! I am sure that all of the tickets that this college is allotted for the game are not behind the goal posts or limited to a section between the ten yard strip on one side of the field and that very same line on the opposite side of the field. If so, something is radically wrong with our Athletic Department for having something like that shoved off on them! However, I do not believe that is the case because it happened last year when the game was played here on Kyle Field.
After all, our game with the University is the biggest one of the season to 98% of us fellows and I am bull-headed enough to believe that we should have something better than end zone seats to choose from—at least the first dozen or so to step up with their money. I hardly think that our money isn't valued just about on a par with that of outsiders. And am I stretching things too far to even imagine that our mothers and fathers enjoy the game as much as other people? I am hardly in a position to say anything about our own personal section since it's in as good a position as can be expected, but I can and am griping about the choice of seats we get for our relatives and friends. We should at least get a fair start with the other customers in this ticket buying business.
I don't profess to know all of the angles attached to the method of selling tickets to our Turkey Day game, but I do know that it's

What does flying 10 hours...alone... DO to a pilot?

You've read about Doug Corrigan, Howard Hughes, Amelia Earhart, Wiley Post and all the rest. But there's one story you seldom read. What happens to fliers on those long-distance flights? To their minds? Their bodies? Their nerves? What's it like to be up there alone, hour after hour? An Army pilot gives you a dramatic word-picture of exactly what goes on during a long-distance flight.
