The contract for heating and plumbing on the twelve dormitories and the dining hall was awarded to C. Wallace Company of Dallas on their low bid of $225,737, which with an additional $2,960 for plumbing and $2,290 for heating for the additional 80 rooms totaled $230,987.

The contract for electric wiring on the buildings was awarded to the Curtis Electric Company of Austin on a low bid of $73,990, plus $1840 for wiring for the additional rooms making a total of $75,830.

The total amount of the three contracts for general construction, plumbing, heating and wiring is $1,644,817.

Architect A. C. Finn was authorized by the Board to submit a breakdown schedule of the work to be performed under the RFC loan agreement as follows:

best predictions are that the cotton crop, now being picked, will earn only $494,000,000. The United States exported 67 per cent of its cotton crop in the years 1909 to 1913. In the last three years only 43 per cent of our cotton has been exported; this means ruinous surpluses, ridiculously low prices. The result is poverty throughout the South, one-half of whose population lives on cotton," Dean Kyle said.

"Nowhere," says Dean Kyle, "has the loss of foreign trade hit harder than in Texas, which produces one-sixth of the world's cotton, and which exports 90 per cent of its crop. Cotton contributes 61 per cent of the entire agricultural income, including livestock, of America's largest state."
 "The imposition of the protective tariff for over 100 years, culminating in the excesses of 1921, 1922, and 1930, so completely blocked our exports that our farmers were suddenly confronted with large surpluses. Since the surpluses could not be sold abroad and since with 15,000,000 unemployed they could not be utilized at home, the only immediate practical way of reducing the surpluses was through the crop reduction program.
 "But in the long run, if we could wipe out the tariff excesses, the farmers would need no crop control program," asserted Dean Kyle. "Due to our climate, our soil, and the intelligence of our farmers, we could produce cotton more cheaply here than anywhere in the world if we were not handicapped by an artificial tariff.

The Board will meet again at College Station next Saturday morning to go into further details of these construction projects.

sure to take over the harvesting of cotton, should greatly reduce the cost of production and help reclaim our export market. But the only fundamental way to save what we can of our agricultural export market is to carry through Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade treaties to their fullest extent. That means a reduction of our tariff walls, not to free trade, but to a revenue tariff," concludes Dean Kyle.
