NEEDED COOPERATION

The yardmaster was interviewing an Irishman who had applied for a job as a motor bus driver.

"Can you drive a car?" asked the yardmaster.

"Can Oi drive a car?" repeated the Irishman scornfully.

"Well, suppose you run the bus into the shed."

Pat climbed onto the trembling vehicle. He looked around, grabbed the biggest lever and pulled for all he was worth. Zip—she went into the shed. Pat saw trouble ahead, and, guessing what would happen, reversed the lever. Out she went; then in again.

"I thought you said you could run a car," demanded the yardmaster.

But Pat had an answer ready. "Oi had her in three times. Why didn't ye shut the door?"

NOT FAR OFF

The American negro, Sam, was on a tour of Egypt. Here he saw, in the Valley of the Kings, the tombs of long-dead Pharaohs covering the plain as far as the eye could see. There he saw the pyramids lining the banks of the Nile for miles and miles, and learned that each one was the burial place of a deceased sovereign.

"How do you like the country?" asked the guide.

"Brother," replied Sam, his teeth chattering, "this am no country. This am a exaggerated cemetery."
