Rastus and Liza were married but a short time when he came home with a big washtub, a washboard and a handsome three-foot mirror.

Liza—Whut's all de truck you brung?

Rastus—You-all kin take yo pick. Yo kin take de tub an' washboard an' go to work, or you kin take de mirror an' set down and watch yo'self starve.

—Medley

He passed the hospital corridor nervously, cold sweat stood out on his brow. If they would only hurry! God—every minute seemed an eternity. Would they never let him know? This couldn't happen to him. She meant his whole life, his everything, his—all. The door opened! A nurse approached him timidly. Her lips parted. He held his breath as she spoke: "Yeah, I can get off tonight!"

Once more a new freshman year rolls around, bringing to mind the allegedly true story of a vulnerable professor at one of the Eastern colleges conducting the 45th renewal of his Psych class. All went well for a few weeks, when one day the old boy noticed that a freshman in the front row was the only person in the room not taking notes. Halting his peroration in the middle of a sentence, the savant leaned over and said, "No notes, Jones?"

"No, sir, came the reply, " I never take them in this course. I use my father's notes."

Guard—Fell those muscles, sugar; I'm a man of steel.

Erma—Well, I'm a woman as hard as flint.

Guard—Good! Let's spark.

—Reserve Red Cat.

"Is my face dirty or is it my imagination?"

"Well, your face is clean, but I don't know much about your imagination."

—Malteaser.

He—That chicken we had in the Mess Hall today was an incubator chicken.

Him—How do you tell?

He—Why no chicken could be that tough and have a mother.

Five gallons of gas and a quart of gin,

And all they found

Was a mess of tin.

—Calif. Tech.

Prof—Will you, please, explain the difference to me between shillings and pence?

Frosh—You can walk down the street without shillings.
