

Top left, the new first family of Texas, left to right, Pat, Mrs. O'Daniel, the Governor, Molly and Mike . . . Top right, not Alice through the looking-glass but Molly through a car window. This shot was taken during the parade through downtown Austin to the capitol building Tuesday afternoon; Molly led the caravan, followed immediately by the Governor, who sat up on the backrest in a long, red automobile while newsreel cameramen and camera bugs found the best "copy" in years . . . Lower photo is the Aggie Band, which outshone all others at the affair. Not named official military band, the Aggie aggregation nevertheless became that in practice. Greatest surprise of the day came when the Aggie Band entered the stadium, for the Longhorn Band stood up in a body and cheered the Aggieland representatives. It drew more applause from the spectators than anything else except O'Daniel himself.
