

TALKING SHOP

Because the staff has put out a lot of effort on this issue of the rag, we believe you'll like it.

Responsible in large part for this issue is the work done by one of the sophomores on the staff, George Fuermann, who has been on the staff of the newspaper almost all year but who contributes to the magazine for the first time in this issue. His article on "Female Mail Troubles" came to our desk marked "Aided and Abetted by Bill Murray," which information we pass on to you.

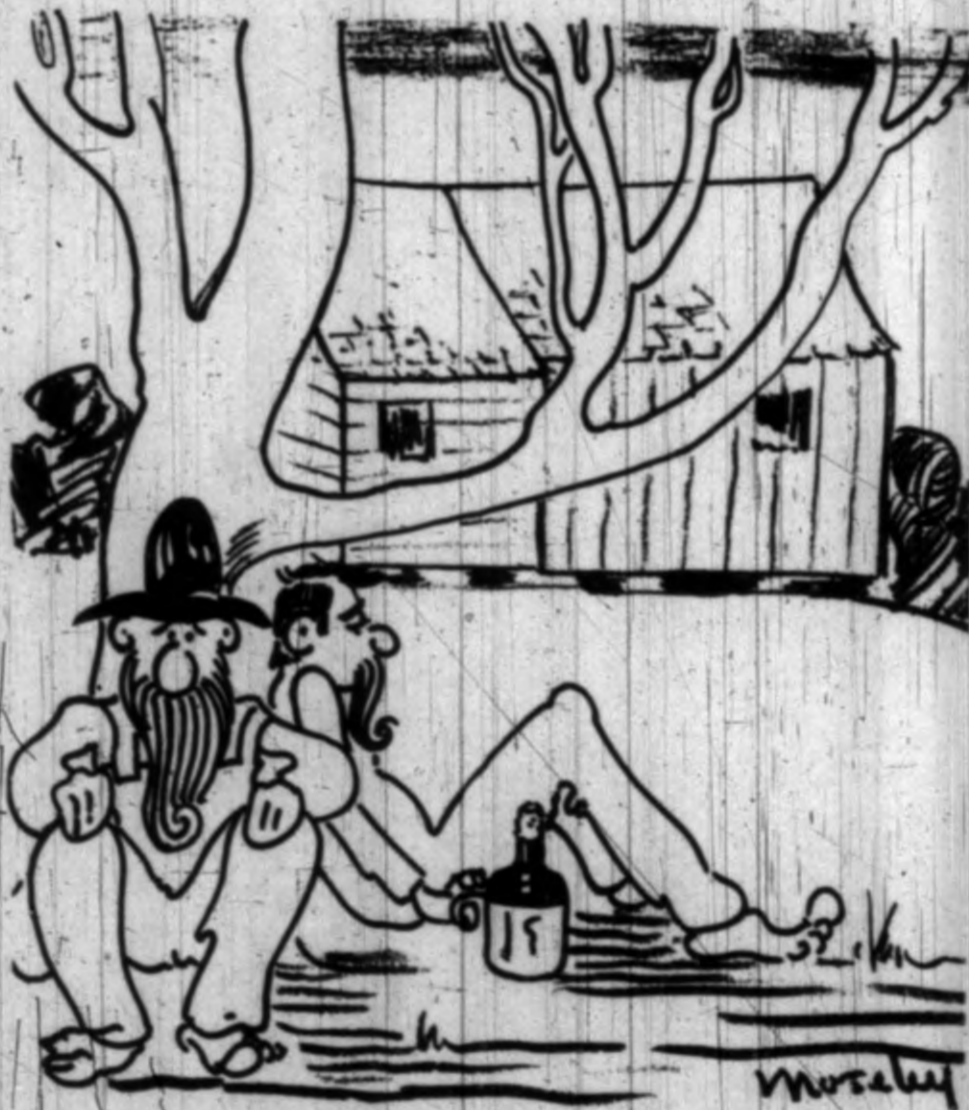

A story by Charlie Wilkinson, a junior editor of the newspaper, is "It Happened in Goodwin," a local story with an angle which may seem strange to anyone outside Aggieland but which is recognized as "right stuff" by around 6,000 students.

Three features to which we would call your attention are John Moseley's proposed dorm and mess hall furniture on page 11 and two articles, "Quiz on the Quizzers" and "500 Years Hence," both of which are good for laughs in some quarters of the student body, the former particularly among those students acquainted pretty well with the School of Arts and Sciences.

Ray Treadwell takes over Paul Ketelsen's place with shows, just as he has on the newspaper. The reason is that Ketelsen has been appointed junior editor of the magazine. Treadwell is a junior editor of the newspaper, who, along with Wilkinson, devotes most of his time to straight news coverage.

Well, after a lot of time spent by the editors, particularly by Ketelsen, this rag's ready. Carry on from here yourself. If you like it, we're glad. If you don't, let us know.

"I say, Piedmont, old man, what is your attitude toward Governor O'Daniel's pension plans?"
