A FRESHMAN'S CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Miss Fix:

I am a Freshman in A. & M., and I would like to have your advice on an important matter. I have been taking out a girl for the past six months. Do you think it would be all right for me to try to kiss her? If she slaps my face, what'll I do?

Yours perplexedly,
I. M. A. Fish.

My dear Mr. Fish:

You say that you have been going with the girl for six months and have never kissed her. My boy, you don't need advice as to what to do if she slaps you, but on what to do if she doesn't.

Dorothy Fix.

"Let's play house.—I'll be the walls and get plastered."

"I want a book about 'The Red Ship,' 'The Scarlet Cruiser,' or something like that."

Salesman: "Here you are, Freshman, 'The Rubiyat'."

—Exchange

She: "Where did you learn to kiss like that?"

He: "Oh, me, I'm a glass blower."

—Froth

Down the track at 60 miles per hour sped the crack limited, smoke like a thick veil behind it. The engineer, a sturdy Swede, rode with his hand on the brake lever, an alert gleam in his blue Norse eyes.

On the same track, rushing along, came a second train, the engineer dead drunk.

Horror froze on the Norse engineer's face as he saw the other train bearing down on him. He slammed on the brakes, shut his eyes, and waited for the crash. But that crash never came. Good old Rudyard Kipling came to the rescue when he said,

"Souise is souise and Norse is Norse, and never the trains shall meet."

"Do you engage in any extra-curricular activity?"

"No, sir; you see, wine makes me sick, I don't know any women, and I can't sing, so I just study."

—Exchange

"What would you do if I turned you down?" she asked. After a few moments of silence, she nudged him and asked, "Didn't you hear me?"

He looked down at her apprehensively.

"I beg your pardon," he said apologetically. "I thought you were addressing the radio."
