

These Men Are Slated To Lecture Here For Special Course

From left to right above are the next five speakers for the special lecture course in Agricultural Economics 423 (Our Natural Resources and Their Conservation). The course, conducted by the Ag Eco Dept. and open to all, is the same as that being offered by ten other colleges and universities of the Southwest. The lectures are at 10 a. m. daily in the Civil Engineering lecture room.

Caesar "Dutch" Hohn, soil and water conservation specialist of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service here, will speak this morning on the subject "Conservation District Law."

Tomorrow, Freddie M. Shaw, assistant soil conservationist of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, Tyler Area (with the Civilian Conservation Corps at Madisonville) will speak on "Agronomic Practices in Soil and Water Conservation."

Tuesday, July 4, E. N. Holmgren, administrator of the agricultural conservation program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration here will speak on the conservation work of the A. A. A.

Wednesday, Charlie M. Moore, assistant agricultural engineer of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service at Tyler, will speak on "Soil and Water Conservation Engineering." And Thursday, A. T. Chalk, junior forester of the Soil Conservation Service at Tyler, will lecture on "Woodland and Wildlife Management."

During their recent visit to the New York World's Fair, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England were presented with a gold troyon and crystal perisphere as a memento of the theme of the exposition.

Other speakers on the opening day's program included Dr. Harry Holton of S. M. U. and Supt. J. W. Calaway of Clay County. Monday night C. R. Reagan of Austin spoke in the Y. M. C. A. on improving the program by the use of visual aids, and illustrated his talk with motion pictures.

Dr. S. H. Whitley, president of East Texas State Teachers College, tossed a minor bombshell into the conference Tuesday morning when he advocated turning over functional teachers' meetings to the teachers themselves and at times even to the students rather than always having the superintendents handle such meetings.

Other speakers Tuesday were Mrs. R. R. Harvin, Nacogdoches supervisor; L. R. Center, principal of Hogg Junior High School of Houston; Dr. Maycie Southall,
