back home, learned a few new plays and then rang up their first victory, 12 to 0, at Austin.

The rivalry between the Cadets and Steers is friendly, though none the less intensive, now; but years past it was bitter. Student body battles in 1908 and 1909 led to an eventual split in relations for three years. The Aggies won their next two victories within a two-week period, 23 to 0 and 5 it wasn't for several seasons that the game was scheduled for Thanksgiving Day definitely each year.

Coach Dana Bible's undefeated, untied and unscored-on Aggies took the Longhorns 7 to 0 both in 1917 and 1919, but the Steers took that same group of Aggies, who then were seniors, 7 to 3 at Austin in 1921.

That is a part of the long and colorful Aggie-Longhorn grid history and that's why the players on both teams dedicate their football careers to winning the annual game and, regardless of their records in other games for the year, play the Thanksgiving Day game as though the championship was at stake.

the game ended with the Steers winning their first game of the season 7 to 0.

This year both teams are dangerous and the 35,000 people who will witness the scrap will get their DOLLARS ? ? ? ? ? worth.

This year it will be the fancy running of Jack Crain, the mighty Texas mite, against the power and passing of "Jarrin' John" Kimbrough, Jim Thomason, Marland Jeffrey, Mar-to 0 in 1909, and won again by a 14 to 8 count in 1910, but the Longhorns bellowed back to cop a 6 to 0 triumph in 1911.

The teams didn't meet again until 1915, the Aggies winning an upset 13 to 0 on Kyle Field. That started the home-and-home series, but

Last year the Cadets went to Austin and it looked like they would stomp the Steers into the "Forty Acres." The Steers had not won a game during the entire season, but they put everything they had into one game and led the Aggies seven to nothing until late in the game when Robnett knocked Moers loose from the ball as the Steers pulled a reverse on their own goal line and Olbrich pounced on the ball for an Aggie touchdown. The Steers swarmed through when the Aggies attempted the conversion and
