Tennessee Has Great Football Team; They Want To Play Aggies With Scouts, Etc.

Tennessee thinks they have more than one powerful football team. They want to play their first string in the Rose Bowl, their second string in the Sugar Bowl, their reserves in the Orange bowl, and play the Texas Aggies in the Cotton Bowl with their scouts, band majors and majorettes.

We expect that their scouts, band majors and majorettes could play better than their first string. At least that bunch plays against stronger opposition each week. The scouts at least get to see the teams they are scouting playing against some pretty fair ball clubs.

Aggies In Poor Condition For Major Game; All Starters Will Be Able To Play In Battle

Although the Aggies have some men who are ailing from injuries received last week, they will all be in condition to at least start the game today.

Marshall Robnett suffered a broken nose and a limbe burn last week, but will be in the starting eleven with that number "43" shining.

Charles Henke has a lip that is cut through and through, but Lil "Dr. Brinkley" Dimmitt will have him fixed up some way to go and his number "38" will be at the other guard. Those same two numbers took the field against the Owls in the same positions two years ago. At that time they were gracing the backs of Virgil Jones and Joe Routt.

Ernie Pannell, also with a broken nose, will have to play with a "bird cage" on his helmet, but he will play. That is a tough break for the fluttering Owls. They were hoping those three men would be out.

"Cotton" Price may start this afternoon at quarterback for the Cadets. It has been some time since the senior quarterback was able to start a fray.

Aggie Fish Play Yearlings Wednesday; Tilt Was Scheduled For Thursday Morning

It is official that the Aggie Fish will play the Texas Yearlings on Wednesday afternoon before Thanksgiving instead of on Thursday morning as has been scheduled.

This game should be a battle between two of the best freshmen teams in the conference. The Fish have been putting in long hours, many of them scrimmaging against the varsity, and they should be in good playing shape for the game.

Some of the best looking Fish to date are Jack Swamk and "Bull" Tullus at tackle, Wilson at end and Tom Pickett, Willie Zapalac, Webster and Bando in the backfield.

"Two Can't Smoke As Cheaply As One" Proved

Boy, you really need those extra smokes per pack, if you're an Emory University student. A survey there revealed that if you buy one pack, you're almost sure to have one-quarter of the 20 bummed before the last one is gone. Definitely, two can't smoke as cheaply as one!

Here's something new the Democrats are being blamed for these days. The editor of the Wheaton College Record received a letter which said: "Dear Editor (You Democrat): We never froze at homecoming when Coolidge and Hoover were presidents."

Aggie-Texas Feud Started Back in 1894

A. & M., Longhorns Meet for 46th Time Thanksgiving Day

Eighteen hundred and ninety-four—that was the year all this Texas Aggie-Texas University football rivalry started with a 38-0 victory for the Longhorns. Since that time the Aggies have been continually trying to catch up and when they meet on historic Kyle Field, Texas, Thanksgiving, Nov. 30, they will be meeting for the 46th time and the Longhorns have the margin 27 to 15 in the matter of victories and the other 4 have ended in those "moral victory" ties.

Tradition says the home team wins but don't let that slogan fool you. In 1922 the Aggies won at Austin, 14-7, but to prove the traditional saying is all wrong, Texas came right back in 1923 to make the Cadets "take it on the chin, 0-6."

Texas' coach, Dana X. Bible, was then at A. & M. and had the glory and gloom of both those jinx years but now he is on the other side of the fence and nothing would bring more happiness to him than that he could reverse the hoodoo and take the game of football back to rest forever in the trophy case at Austin.

Coach Homer Norton also has ideas that he would like to give the winning ball to the captain for the game. It is a custom he has followed all year and, although he has not said, he probably will follow that system on Turkey Day—unless the boys decide that the ball belongs to Norton for bringing the Aggies "out of the Wilderness" that settled on the A. & M. campus after the 1927 team won the last title for the Aggies.

Just for the benefit of the record here is the all-time Texas Aggie-University of Texas record:

Wild Game Notes

Fishermen living in jackrabbit-infested sections of Texas will find the levers of big rabbits make excellent fish bait.

A black fox, an extremely rare animal, is being sought in Comal County. Several persons, including the state game warden there, have seen the animal, one of the few, if not the only one in Texas.

Whitewing doves, as predicted by the Game Department before the hunting period opened, were more plentiful this season than in many years. The Department's wardens in the Rio Grande Valley estimated that 250,000 were killed the first three weeks of the season.

Mourning doves were also plentiful throughout most of the state and were remaining in the northern portion of Texas later than usual, reports to the Game Department indicate.

"We Was Robbed" Thought Aggies In '37; Today They Will Strive To Even Score

Aggies To Seek Revenge For 1937 "Rats" Watson Deal

By Hub Johnson

It was two years ago this past Monday when two teams met in Houston with equal statistic rating and equal records, three wins, two losses, and one tie, to settle an important question. The question was whether or not the Aggies could remain in the race for the crown. Rice Institute was the team to beat. On paper it was even most of the way with the A. & M. eleven holding a slight edge. The sport writers said it was the Aggies, turned and said it was the Owls, and then on the eve of the game said it was a toss-up.

Came the day, and the fans filled the stands only to see the referee walk up and down the field. Penalty after penalty was the gist of this game, and against the Cadets.

It was a dry field, and Dick Todd behind some brilliant playing on the part of Brahma Jones and Joe Routt, the best of guards, Jim Shockey, Roy Young, and Dick Vitek marched the length of the field for the first tally. A penalty was called for off sides and one for use of an illegal shift. Todd snaked 38 yards and then passed to Britt for the six points. This seemed like a good lead, but the Aggies came back in the last half to try to run up another. This is when hell broke loose. Again and again the man in the white shirt called time and moved the ball back up the field.

For 75 of the total 85 yards marked against the Aggies and leaving but 121 yards of the actual 206 gained, it was moved for the illegal (?) shift. For the first time in seven starts the shift was questioned.

Still with this handicap the Aggies continued to hold the Rice team until late in the final quarter. With but three minutes left to play 'All American' Lane cracked the line for six points. The kick was blocked and it was well and good. Many were satisfied with the outcome but some 3,500 Aggies returned to College Station with the idea that they were robbed.

Four of the Aggie players who saw action in that game, if it be called a game, are to play their last game against the Bayou City school today. Joe Boyd, Herb Smith, Cotton Price, and Joe White will be on the field to furnish the spark and to collect their debt. It is their debt and ours as well, but these four were on the ground when it was taken from them.

Few of the Rice players who saw action in that tilt remain. The twelfth man for Rice has long since been gone, at least from Aggie games. "Rats" Watson will never again officiate another. Ernie Lane is still on the square, but Ollie Cordill has taken much of his fame and glory.

Rice has had a slow start but they had a slower one in '37, and will be out to mark up a win. The Aggies, too, will be out to mark up another, but most of all to collect from the Southern team for the dirt which was done. "We was robbed", was the cry then. Saturday the same numbers will dot the field. Joe Routt's memorable 43 will still be seen as Robnett goes crashing through, and Brahma Jones' 38 will be worn by the opposite guard, Henke.

The present seniors were sophomores then and the juniors were the 'fish', but with the memorable story handed down to all classes, the corps is counting on this game to even up the deed.

Story of Ex-Aggie's 245-Yard Touchdown Run Described on Air

The story of how Victor "Choc" Kelley ran 245 yards to score a touchdown for Texas A. & M. College in a game with Louisiana State back in 1907 was dramatized on the "Strange As It Seems" radio program at 7:30 p. m. Thursday, according to advice received by Dean E. J. Kyle from John Hix in Hollywood, the creator of the series.

Kelley is now coaching on the Pacific Coast and the broadcast included his personal appearance before the microphone. The program was over the Columbia Broadcasting System and was heard over the following Texas stations: KRLD, Dallas; KTRH, Houston; KTSA, San Antonio. Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company is sponsor of the program.

Mary Weaver, 11, of Bloomington, Ind., counted to 100 in a hide-and-seek game and then cried "Hitler!", explaining to a bystander: "That means 'Here I come, ready or not.'"

T. C. U. Strives For Victory Over Texas Longhorns

Fort Worth, Nov. 16.—Texas Christian University will move in a body to Austin Saturday, filled with a determined belief that a Horned Frog victory over the University of Texas Longhorns is well within the realm of possibilities.

One of the chief inspirations for this belief is a sophomore quarterback by the name of Kyle Gillespie, who has sparked his mates in both victories they have to their credit this season.

Gillespie, nursing a trick knee, has still turned in two of the best performances of any T. C. U. this season, in the Centenary and Tulsa games.

"Gillespie has earned himself a home on the starting eleven," Coach Dutch Meyer reports—with smiles! "The boy has made us look like a football team. He'll be in there against Texas Saturday if he's able to walk onto the field!"

When not riddled with injuries, the Frogs have been "almost" good enough. They dropped their first three contests by only seven points.

"Maybe the cure for that 'almost' has been found" is what the fans are muttering, and hoping.

Against their two common opponents—Arkansas and Baylor—Texas and T. C. U. made something like the same showing. Texas won from Arkansas and T. C. U. lost, but both scores were 14-13, the difference of a point after touchdown.

"And S. M. U. and Baylor have demonstrated that Crain CAN be stopped," Frogs fans are pointing out.

The game will be the occasion of the official T. C. U. student body football trip for 1939. The Horned Frog Band of 50 pieces and about 1,000 students will make the trip to Austin in a special train.

"Study in Bed, Make Better Grades," Advised

"Study in bed and get good grades."

That's the conclusion of Columbia University's instructor in Irish culture, Collins Healy, after a long and detailed study of Irish methods of study, which revealed that the students of the Emerald Isle did their studying while in a lying, reclining or horizontal posture.

"The vision of schools equipped with reclining and sleeping accommodations may seem fantastic and far removed from what we currently consider good educational practice, but psychological investigations accredited the horizontal posture during study as sound," Mr. Healy says.

According to Edmund Campion who wrote his history of Ireland in 1571, Mr. Healy continues, it was a common sight to see students "groveling upon couches of straw, their books at their noses, themselves lying flat prostrate, and so to chaunte out their lessons by peace-meale, being the most part

Dana X. Says Foot Still In Football

Bible Intends To Use Both Crain And Davis In TCU Game

You may talk of the Southwest's dazzling passing game, and the trend back to ground power like Texas A. & M., S. M. U. and Baylor have unleashed this autumn, but take it from Dana X. Bible—the foot is still in football.

So important does Texas U.'s bald mentor deem good punting that he has decided on a rather drastic lineup change to get it—the shift of little Gilly Davis from left halfback to fullback.

Texas has been consistently out-punted this season, but Davis has been fairly long and accurate on his relatively few efforts. Bible hasn't been able to use him regularly, however, because he played the same position as Jack Crain, the Longhorns' most dangerous ball carrier.

For the Texas Christian game in Austin today Bible plans to use both Crain and Davis in his starting backfield. Davis, weighing a scant 150, probably becomes the lightest fullback in major college football today.

He will replace Pete Layden, a 170-pounder with drive and some passing skill but also a sore knee that has kept him hovering around a hospital all fall. Layden is Texas' best punter—but kicking hurts his knee worse than anything else.

Poor punting cost the Longhorns many yards in the three games they have lost—Oklahoma, S. M. U. and Baylor.

Saturday's game will be the last home stand of the '39 Longhorns. By winning they could establish the first clear home record for a Texas team since 1930. They have already defeated Florida, Arkansas and Rice at Memorial stadium.

lustie fellows of twenty-five years and upwards."

Mr. Healy cited another psychologist, who said: "Investigations seem to indicate rather definitely a large number of writers, men of science, ministers, statesmen, and those who have become distinguished in various lines, chose practically the horizontal position for their most careful intellectual work."
