He's Undeclared Too

L. J. "Pete" Gullede of the class of '31, living at 5446 Richmond Avenue, Dallas, has not let adversity, in the form of a crippling automobile accident, stop his activities. From his bed at the above address, he operates a subscription and renewal magazine business and has built the business to a substantial size.

Gullede was injured while a junior veterinary medicine student at A. & M., on his way home for the Christmas holidays in 1929. He suffered a broken back.

The magazine business is limited, of course, to mailing and telephoning. He can handle subscriptions or renewals to any magazine, periodical, or trade journal published anywhere. Orders can be sent to him at the above address and will be promptly and efficiently handled.

"That's My Pop," Say Three Freshmen At Sul Ross About Freshman Fellow Student

A father and his three sons are freshman students in Sul Ross State College at Alpine and the group plans to finish the four years of college together, receiving their degrees at the same time.

John Godsey Sr., John Jr., Joe and Eugene are the college-going Godseys. Back home in Wink are the mother, a 6-year-old sister and a 13-year-old brother who will be coming into college as the elder Godseys are going out.

John Sr. for a number of years worked with major oil companies in west Texas, but a recent accident injured him in such a way that he has had to give up active work in oil fields.

About the time of their father's injuries the two elder Godsey boys came home from four-year service with the United States army in the Philippines and the orient.

Eugene, the youngest, was graduating from Wink High School, when Godsey Sr. decided on a belated college career to take the place of his active work in the oil fields.

The Godseys live in one of the student cottages on Sul Ross campus, do all of their own cooking and house cleaning and find time for varied activities.

PAULSON SPEAKS IN CONNECTION WITH AG COURSE

"All students of agriculture should have an understanding of the economics of cooperative purchasing and marketing," declared Dr. W. E. Paulson, marketing research specialist for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, in an address recently before juniors in the Department of Agricultural Economics.

This was the third in a series of nine addresses arranged by the Department of Agricultural Economics in connection with the department's course on "Principles and Practices of Cooperation."

Dr. Paulson discussed the growth of the farmers cooperative movement, particularly in Texas, and pointed out some of the specific problems of associations handling such commodities as fruits and vegetables and turkeys and in rendering such services as ginning of cotton and packing of fruits and vegetables. He also emphasized that it is the function of the Agricultural Experiment Station to gather information relative to the organization and operation of cooperatives that will lead to more efficient management by associations.

Explanation of Aggie 'Highwaying' Code Is Sent Leading Newspapers by Committee

As a committee representing the 6,000-strong student body of Texas A. & M. College, Cadet Colonel D. B. "Woody" Varner, Senior President Max McCullar, Head Yell-Leader F. A. "Bodie" Pierce, Battalion Editor Bill Murray, Junior President Ele Baggett, Sophomore President Willard Clark, and Freshman President Frank Young met Friday afternoon in regard to the A. & M. "highwaying" situation, and concurred in making the following statement, which is repeated in The Battalion for the benefit of the student body and is being mailed out by The Battalion through the Publicity Office to all the leading newspapers of the state for publication:

"In a few days hundreds of Texas Aggie cadets will hit the highways and byways of Texas headed home for Christmas. For years Aggies have been 'highwaying,' because this mode of travel is inexpensive (in keeping with the average Aggie's pocketbook) and because it affords the best chance in the world for the boys to make outside contacts, both of a social and a business nature.

"Aggie highwaying traditions have been handed down from class to class ever since the horse and buggy and muddy roads were replaced by the automobile and concrete highways. The training given each A. & M. 'fish' is based on a code of ethics which insists that each cadet await his turn in line for a ride, no matter how many may be ahead of him. There is no rushing of the car offering to pick up those first in line.

"Following the code, each Aggie promptly introduces himself to those with whom he is riding. An Aggie at all times is courteous and polite, does not smoke without permission; is ready to "spell" the driver at the wheel and to help in the care of the automobile; and observes at all times the time-proven rule of gentlemanly conduct.

"Few are the Aggies who violate these customs. Those few who do are by no means representative of or respected by the A. & M. student body.

"Motorists who are able to help Aggies on their way home are asked by this committee representing the student body to give the boys a lift, if at all possible. If any driver picks up an Aggie who acts ungentlemanly, please report that case to us. But we feel sure that the great majority will make suitable traveling companions."

The game is played each year in the Tulane Stadium which has a seating capacity of 70,000. The "Aggie" section is in the south end and the Tulane section will be in the north end. Although the seats will be behind the goal-posts, they will offer a fine view as the bowl is built close behind the end zone.

As a city, New Orleans ranks first in population among the cities of the South. It offers numerous means of recreation and is noted for its historic and romantic charm. Bill Cunningham of the Boston Post has the following to say in regard to New Orleans: "There are those who undoubtedly would call New Orleans a wild and wicked city, comparable to Sodom, Gomorrah or the carnal creations of the degenerate Caesars. There are others who can and do call it one of the most delightful cities certainly on this continent, if not in the entire world. It's a matter of interpretation and the unit of measure is the individual.

"The city, itself, is everything, and it offers everything—the good, the bad; the chaste, the sinful; the beautiful, the drab; the inspiring, the repulsive. If a man wants to make an ape of himself, there are plenty of places and people to help him. If, on the other hand, he wants to enrich his experience and his knowledge in matters cultural, artistic, historical and even such assemblies are neglected because of obvious hindrances which are present in the inauguration and the development of such a law-enforcing body in a newly incorporated city. The meetings contain a great deal of informality and looseness, and still retain that legality and seriousness that goes to make them official, binding, and authoritative. The past four trials required an average time of five minutes apiece. The owners of the cabs appeared, waived trial by jury, were found guilty, paid their fines and departed.
