Davis And Dahl—

topics which came up for discussion which did not apply to A. & M. but that for the most part, he and Dahl obtained information and ideas which could be applied to the advantage of our school. Among them was a discussion of the honor system. Delegates from Washington and Lee University which has that plan in effect stated that the success of the plan depended on the expression on the part of the student body of a positive desire for its installation. Another point brought out at the convention was that the student participation in suggesting curriculum changes. For the most part, other schools have student committees which work either independently, or in cooperation with the faculty.

It was learned that the Student Welfare Committee, which has been functioning at A. & M. for some years, is a comparatively recent innovation as far as schools in general are concerned.

Concerning student elections, it was noted that most schools require all candidates for executive offices, such as class officers, to have a thorough knowledge of parliamentary procedure. In addition, there are scholastic standards which qualify or disqualify a candidate for any student office. Since A. & M. was not a member college of the N. S. F. A., the status of our representatives was that of observers. They were allowed to participate in all activities of the delegates, with the exception of election of officers. It is thought that the school could benefit much from membership in the Federation, and it is hoped that by convention time next year, membership will be obtained.

Both Davis and Dahl reported a most enjoyable and educational trip.

Poll Shows—

Of those approving these specify:
It should be voluntary.....58
It should be compulsory.....13
Did not specify29
These approve:
In schools where it is voluntary96
In schools where it is compulsory92
In schools where it is not taught82
It should be noted that this poll was taken after war broke out. Surveys figures show that since the start of hostilities abroad there has been a marked increase of approval of all matters that have to do with national defense.

Football Shoved Into Background, But Memories Of A Glorious Season Remain

By Jimmie Cokinos

Now that football has been shoved into the background by the timely appearance of basketball, and baseball trading, a few memories of the past football season flash through our mind. January is the "hot stove" league goes into action about what to expect of baseball this year and above all the settling of the coaching situations for the 1940 season.

Brightest crack of the season: The genial Bill "Rock" Audish comes up with this, "Here is to the Texas Aggies, untied, unbeaten, and unaccommodated to it all!" His roomy, "Big Dog" Dawson, comes across with this one: As the Aggies came out on the field in the Sugar Bowl, "Dog" put his hands on his hips and looked at the crowd that was in the stadium and remarked, "Boy, all of the white folks are here today!"

A thing of beauty to watch . . . Herb Smith racking that interference as it would come around his end. He was a master at this "neck-breaking" affair as he could throw his body into the interference, spilling the whole works thus making the ball-carrier an easy mark for the line-backers to hit.

Best trick play of the year. . . This honor goes to the Athletic Council at Rice Institute. The play started at the "R" Association banquet where the Council announced that they were satisfied with Coach Jimmy Kitts and that he need not worry about his job.

The following day the same group that threw bouquets at Kitts threw him a brick with a pink-slip. Boy, I bet this play made even the great Houdini turn over in his grave.

Unluckiest team. . . Those tall, lanky boys from the Ozarks get the nod from here. The Hogs made more first downs than the Aggies in their game and still were not able to outscore them. The T. C. U. Horned Frogs ran a tight first because in the games they lost, they roundly outplayed their opponent in statistics. But in the long run it is the score that is on the score board that counts and not

"Hereford Herd" Is Informal Group; Club Meetings Feature Bull Sessions

Among the more unusual — and most informal — of all home-town clubs on the Aggie campus is the young "Hereford Herd," organized at the start of the present semester.

And how is it unusual? Well, for one thing it has just nine members—and nine presidents. The reason for this, the Herd explains, is that so no one of them will seem any higher in position than the rest, and so any of them has just as much chance to talk as all the rest.

And too, this is one club that has no program whatsoever. And yet the meetings seem to go over with a "bang." Seldom is a member absent, and they all get great enjoyment from the meetings.

To look in on one of them, an innocent spectator might think that the Hereford boys came to college for the "bull sessions." For that's just what the meetings consist of—"bull sessions"—and no organized ones at that, but certainly interesting. The topics?—Oh, such things as incidents of interest at home, the latest feminine conquests, and occasionally, club problems. When anyone wants to talk he just waits till the others take a breath and then he starts; if his voice is strong enough he has the floor until he runs down or has to stop for aid.

The Herd had a Christmas dance, just as did all the other home-town clubs; and it was stated by many of the guests that it was the best dance ever given in the budding metropolis of Hereford. . . What, you don't know where Hereford is? Well, just get a large map—be sure it's large—and if you look closely you'll find Hereford somewhere around Amarillo, Texas—that is, if the last dust storm didn't bury it!

Vogue Magazine Offers Photography Contest To Seniors

The editors of Vogue Magazine, a Conde Nast publication, have just announced a Photographic Contest for seniors in American colleges and universities.

The contest offers two career prizes—one for men, one for women—consisting of a six months' apprenticeship, with salary, in the Conde Nast Studios in New York—with the possibility of a permanent position on completion of the period of apprenticeship. In addition, eight cash prizes and honorable mentions will be awarded.

The contest will be composed of a series of eight photographic problems to be presented in the magazine. These will cover a wide range of topics, including outdoor and indoor shots, action, still life, etc. Winners of the contest will join Vogue's New York staff on or about June 15th.

For further information write Conde Nast News Service, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

Grade Points Are Worth Dollar Per Month To Graduates, Prof Discovers

By Bob Nisbet

Recently C. W. Wilkinson of the English Department was requested to speak before a meeting of the Freshman Discussion Group on the subject of "Just Getting By." Immediately after receiving the request, he went into a huddle with the files in the library, and during the following week read four books, 23 magazine articles, and two pamphlets. Some of the facts he found are truly eye-opening. His general conclusion drawn from the study was that within five or ten years after graduation a man's grade-points will earn him a dollar a month. In other words, a man graduating with 250 grade-points will be drawing a salary of $250 or more.

First he pointed out that he was by no means measuring success by the amount of money a man makes. He said, "Whatever success may be—whether one thinks of it as financial reward, assured social position, satisfaction in able work accomplished and recognized, or as a combination of all—many factors contribute, some tangible and some intangible; but records in school correlate so highly with success in life that clearly good school records lead to success, or both are the results of the same characteristics in individuals." He goes on to say that there are some men with poor college records who have made good, but their number is small and are the exceptions to the rule, the more widely exploited because they are exceptions.

Those who rely, he said, on "suck" or "pull" will find themselves on the short end unless it be the kind that results from a greater interest in the work. He quotes politics as being an exception to the rule. With reservations, "men get what they earn and earn what they get."

Baylorites Again To Have "Reverse Weekend"

Social reversal, wherein the co-eds make the dates and pay the bills, is okay for a single weekend but must not exceed that time, so Baylor University students voted in a campus poll.

Though 80 percent favored the reversal, only 45 percent wanted it to continue for longer than three days. Campus gossip has it that the coeds stuffed the boxes on the latter vote.

The weekend, to be observed sometime in February, was begun last year, and question was raised as to continuing the reverse procedure over a complete week this time.

The Bradley College library has a collection of 1,040 books and 6,266 pamphlets dealing with industrial education.
