A. & M. College Men Attend Meeting of District Teachers

A. & M. College was well represented at the meeting of district one of the Texas State Teachers Association in session at Galveston last week.

Saturday morning Dean T. D. Brooks of the school of arts and sciences and the graduate school spoke along the lines of teacher training, emphasizing the work that A. & M. is doing in that field.

Others attending include Prof. W. L. Hughes and Prof. George B. Wilcox of the education department, and Prof. E. L. Williams and E. W. Glenn of the industrial education department.

Mr. William met with the teachers in industrial education. Mr. Glenn went to the meeting from Houston where he had a conference Thursday with machinists, looking toward establishing that phase of training in industrial education.

Harvard University's eight libraries contain 4,079,541 books and pamphlets.

There are now 550 junior colleges in the U. S.

Prince Hubertus to Lowenstein has been appointed visiting professor in international relations at Iowa State College.

The Louisiana State University zoology museum recently was given a collection of skins of 300 rare birds.

Plans are now under way for the opening of the new LaSalette College in Arnolds Park, Iowa, next September.

An Ohio State University men's dormitory has been named after former secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

Every state and 47 foreign countries are represented in the Harvard University student body.

Cotton Pageant—

Featuring fashions by All-American designers, some of the loveliest models of a Houston shop, the Fashion, were presented in a revue of newest creations in cotton for milady to wear this summer.

Sun suits, beach togs, lounging pajamas, street dresses and evening dresses in gay florals, stripes, checks and dots, many of them in contrasting colors and designs, were modeled. Footwear stressed the new wedgies for the beach, the home, and the dance. The new moccasin type sport shoe also was featured.

Floor Show Given
Following the style show, the royal assemblage was entertained with a floor show presented by Kotchetovsky dancers from Houston. Of the group of seven dances perhaps the Gypsy dance by Jacqueline Smith pleased an appreciative audience the most.

Little Marylyn White gave an outstanding performance in her acrobatic waltz, and later teamed with Misses Zehner and Wayne, Spanish dancers, to present a tap line. Featuring cotton in her costume, Barbarlee Lockard gave a toe dance and Carmelita Kilp was seen in an Oriental number. A grand finale by all artists closed the floor show.

Credit for the success of the ninth annual cotton pageant and style show belongs largely to the following people:

Director of pageant, Mrs. L. L. Fouraker.

Arrangements: Prof. J. S. Mogford, general chairman, assisted by B. U. Bing, business manager; J. T. Anderson, assistant business manager; Harry C. Forbes, social secretary; D. W. McElwath, assistant social secretary; Hal Moseley, designer.

Social: P. B. Bennett, J. W. Bailey, W. M. Kimbrough, Johnny Rice, L. L. Edens, R. S. Stone, R. D. Finch, W. H. Benham.
