Problem: What Can Be Done With Unused Election Propaganda

Red headed Dick Clark of Waco, most energetic campaigner seen in Baylor University campus politics of the past decade, was one of the three students winning a yell leaders election but he's still trying to distribute 5,000 left-over circulars.

The handbills were scheduled to be dropped from an airplane on the morning of election day, but the pilot was called out of town. Dick won the race, but didn't want to see the advertising go to waste, so he scheduled a parade of four planes to circle the campus and drop the bills last week. But at the last minute a city ordinance prevented it.
