though. Sugar is "saw-dust," salt and pepper are disguised by the obvious "sand and dirt," coffee is appropriately dubbed "dope," dessert is "cush," and "shoot the sky" would get the water passed your way.

Peas are labeled "shot," "cackle" is the word that gets the eggs, "Shoot the gunwaddin'" is necessary if you want bread, breakfast food rides the not too complimentary title "scabs," and "rabbit" is applied to a salad.

Many Interesting Tales

Tales concerning these Aggie food terms are as many as there are Aggies to tell them but the best ones are usually based on the summer R. O. T. C. camps. In all cases these camps are majority-populated by Texas Aggies and, as a result, students from the nation's other land grant colleges are more or less subject to close adherence to whatever Aggie traditions the cadets may decide to carry over at camp.

The result being: During the first few days of each camp session the out-of-staters are hard-put to learning the Aggie food terms and sometimes it's as long as a week before one of them gets a full meal. The rule is that unless the food is asked for by its correct moniker it isn't passed and many's the time that a non-Aggie has left his place at the table, walked a few feet, got the food he wanted, returned to his place, and then helped himself. Naturally, the rule doesn't hold in either of the two mess halls—guests are accorded all courtesies that a military training makes for. Some More Statistics

Four hundred and sixty-six persons are employed in the two mess halls; 246 of them being part-time student employees who are thus enabled to earn part of their college expenses. The waiters are all students and they are so timed and coordinated that they reach the tables with hot food a few seconds before the cadets. Only three minutes is required to set the food on the table for the entire student body and each waiter serves 24 students family style.

Wherever possible college grown and college produced food commodities are used. During the nine months of the past long session $116,000 was spent for dairy products produced at A. & M.

Whatever your kitchen bill is for a nine-month period, it probably isn't $766,269.05, but that's what it cost to feed the corps last year.

The cost of the food is amazingly low and the quality is good enough to satisfy the corps the year round—and that's saying plenty. Aggies pay 23 cents a meal, which amounts to 69 cents a day for food.

Here's the menu for Friday, October 18:

Breakfast: orange, dry cereal, link sausage and fried eggs, hot biscuits and butter, coffee, and milk.

Dinner: roast beef, mashed potatoes, candied carrots, clover club salad, bread and butter, chocolate pie, and iced tea.

Supper: fried fillet of sole, oven lyonnaise potatoes, green peas, celery and olives, hot rolls and butter, tropical gold cake, coffee and milk.

The two chefs, one at each mess hall, are experts in their field and both are European trained. With their corps of assistants, they are Charles Greissen, trained in the resorts of Switzerland and chef of the historic and legendary Sbis Hall, and Gaston Flaune, chef of the new half-million-dollar Duncan Hall.

The cooking takes about 12 hours a day—it's eaten in 60 minutes! The corps marches into the mess hall, eats and is gone in 20 minutes.

A & M vs TU—

more resolutely attacked the problem of an equitable adjustment and not until 1930 did they succeed.

President Walton, who had made an extensive research into the question was able to throw much light on the hotly debated subject and with the splendid cooperation of all concerned a final, equitable adjustment was agreed upon by the two Boards.

The two Boards requested the Texas State Legislature to amend the constitution, Article 7, section 13 to read as follows. "Quote: The Board of Regents of the University of Texas and The Board of Directors of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas shall expend the Available University Fund for the construction of buildings on the campuses of the respective institutions, and for extensions of their campuses and the equipment of buildings thereof."

This in itself should be sufficient proof to those contradicting the fact that A. & M. is not a branch of the University. In this same amendment the State Legislature specifies that A. & M. shall expend one-third of the permanent University fund, except income from surface leases of the land granted them by this state.

It is quite apparent that A. & M. is not a branch of the University and the only connections whatsoever we have with them is to share in the expenditure on a one-third basis of the financial recipients received from their land grant endowment.

Prizes Offered For Best Speech Of Science Academy

Prizes of $25, $15 and $10 are being offered to members of the Junior division of the Texas Academy of Science for the best scientific talks presented at the meeting in San Antonio on November 8-9. Dr. C. C. Doak, head of the biology department, has received rules and information of the contest from Willis Floyd, professor in the chemistry department of Sam Houston State Teachers College.

Students may enter papers in any of three divisions. Preference will be given first class papers; that is, those in which the student has carried out individual experimentation. Second class papers are those in which the student has helped another person or gathered first hand information on the experiment. Third class papers are those written on authority from some book or journal.

Papers must be sent in before October 30 in order to receive consideration. Dr. Doak may be seen for further information.

The senior division of the Texas Academy of Science will feature three A. & M. faculty members. Dr. Ide P. Trotter, head of the Agronomy department, Dr. L. J. Jones, professor in the Agronomy department, and Dr. E. R. Alexander, head of the Agricultural Education department are the three who will deliver talks on the program.

The society is the affiliation of the various scientific clubs in Texas and was organized to foster cooperation and parallel development among the various societies.

Willkie-Roosevelt Campaign Discussed At Round Table Meet

A discussion of the Willkie-Roosevelt campaign was discussed at a meeting of the Round Table Club last Thursday night. The meeting was in the form of a general group discussion with everyone participating.

The club discussed the following points in addition to many others: (1) If Roosevelt is elected, will he not continue to run every election year and so become a virtual dictator? (2) Will Willkie do anything about the national debt if he is elected? (3) Was not Roosevelt's attempt to pack the supreme court an indication that he may attempt to assume a dictatorship. (4) Is big business not backing Willkie because it expects monetary rewards.

The next meeting of the Round Table Club will take the form of a panel-type discussion with five or six interested members sitting in front of the room and discussing the issue.
