The winning team and the score will foretell the result of the Austin conflict No. 8. Sportsmen are asked to take the decision with a gain of salt, because last year's prophecy was wrong.

Eighteen members of the modern choir, under the direction of William E. Jones, director of music, have formed a vocal ensemble this season. With its object to present chamber music and appear where it would be inconvenient to use the complete choir, works from classic, romantic, and modern schools are presented without a conductor in regular chamber music form.

The ensemble is used to illustrate music lectures by Mr. Jones and has sung at the Federation of Women's Club in Austin and the meeting of the San Antonio Music Teachers.

Movie Review—

larly Brennan's penetrating characterization of the old judge is good, and even if Cooper is the model of the old time hero, he is a good model, and the show is well worth seeing.

Another bit of historical fiction which lends itself as the basis of a better than passing fair movie is used in "THE SEA HAWK." It concerns the escapades of gallant Errol Flynn as the captain of an English privateer in the days of Queen Elizabeth, who raided the Spanish fleet whenever and wherever it could be found. His actions severely strain the relations between the two countries. One of his expeditions to swipe some Spanish gold from Central America is foiled by the actions of a lace-collared fifth columnist who is further trying to stir up a war. Flynn dramatically steals the whole ship upon which he is held as a galley slave and flees home in time to warn the Queen that the Armada is on its way.

Errol Flynn has nearly every chance on the books to show his swashbuckling knavery and he doesn't miss any of them. The result is a picture which is perhaps too hazardous to sound reasonable and too much like the comic strips in that the main guy can get himself out of anything if given enough time. Even so, too much life is better than too little, so "The Sea Hawk" is still better than passing fair.
