After winning from Baylor, the Owls had their feathers plucked by the Mustangs to the extent of their being knocked out of conference championship play.

The Aggie's Conference win sheet is conspicuously vacant of numbers but on the other side are three losses. A double to Arkansas and one to Rice Institute.

Coming to Aggieland will be such stars as Frank Bryski, a great defensive player, standing six feet four inches; his six foot four team mate Joe Frivaldsky who drops them in from the pivot position, and Grady Vaughn, five foot nine inches of controlled cyclone who plays guard with Bryski. During his two years on the team, he has added plenty of zeal and pep to a team that was always fighting hard to win its share of games. Frog is a junior college transfer, and started his basketball career at Aggieland late in the fall of 1938. Since then, he has earned two letters and has been on the starting lineup of nearly every game. His favorite position is forward, but asserts he can play center if he has to. Although not a

His favorite sport hero caused Duncan to do some heavy thinking. "I never thought about that, but I guess Bill Henderson takes the cake," he wistfully replied. During his off hours, Duncan cavorts around the publicity office.
