Shavetails for a Year

TWELVE MONTHS active duty immediately upon graduation! That is quite a blow to seniors expecting to fill jobs at the end of the current semester. It means that these seniors will have to mark time for a year or, to put it differently, take time out from their life plans to serve for a year in the army. "Take time out" is an appropriate phrase, because in the form the seniors are now filling out there is no indication that these and Sports jumped 202%; Education, 214%; Busboys who are going into active duty have any chance of continuing in the army.

This much can be said of the new orders. It is at least comforting to know one way or another what is about to happen. Hitting in the dark and planning in advance for other things with active duty hanging imminent is much worse than knowing even being called.

And the fact that the active duty is coming immediately after completion of the advanced course has the advantage of fixing things whereby the June graduates will have facts to present their respective employers instead of vague supposit-

It will also have the advantage of giving them their year of active duty immediately and not at some other time, which unplanned for, might not be at all convenient with respect to a job.

There is only this question to be raised about the situation. What assurance can we as Reserve Commissioned Second Lieutenants have that our term of active duty will not be extended indefinitely once we are in. Rightly enough, the form calls for twelve months' active duty, but can we bank on Another question will be upon what grounds or what consideration will be used as a basis for deferrment. Will students be permitted to complete their college education in case they do not graduate or in case they desire to do graduate work? These and other questions can only be answered by the War Department and will probably be ansvered for individual cases and not in general terms

Before it can be said that college graduates with reserve commissions are beefing about active duty when other not-so-fortunate individuals of the same age are now serving the same time as conscripts or draftees and living the lives of enlisted men, let us add that there can be no dissenting comment from A. & M. on the necessity for serving the country. A. & M. men are more than glad to do their share and are willing to make endless sacrifices in case these sacrifices are

For some boys a year's active duty will be act, and others. We have entered a new stage in the a welcome blessing and in any case, A. & M. boys have no cause for crying. Think how much worse things could be or could get.

Uncle Sam, please tell us Aggies what it is you want done and when and where (we do not even bother at this stage of the game to ask why) before you give us the word "go".

What Now for France?

EFFECTIVENESS of General Charles de Gaulle's Free French forces in aiding the British in their African successes, continued rumblings from Vichey and Paris, and the growing belief in well-informed circles that Marshal Petain and Reichsfuehrer Hitler are heading for a showdown, have served to focus attention once more on the situation in which conquered France finds herself. Undergraduate students of foreign affairs in the United States feel that France's role is still destined to be important, despite the fact that Petain's regime has virtually no alternative to complete collaboration with the con-

At Iowa State college, the Daily Student waxes skeptical in calling attention to Petain's recent assertion that France is a soverign nation, vested with the duty of defending her soil, extinguishing divergences of opinion and reducing dissidences of the colonies. "According to the French official," continues the Student, "an agreement was made for the two countries (France and Germany) to collaborate in rebuilding a crippled France. Hitler 'forced one to no dictate; no pressure,' Petain said. Maybe so," observes the Iowa publication, "but somehow it just doesn't ring true. The stigma of Fitler's propagandistic methods seems to taint Pein's every word. It is hard to believe that Hitler 't shape the rebuilding of France as he wants

Colleghe University Daily Kansan joins in the view the French government, totalitarian since its

Axis in peace negotiations, regardless of the consequences-chief of which would probably be a declaration of war on Great Britain. And a declaration of war on its traditional ally would precipitate a breach of diplomatic contact with the United States and South American nations which Petain considers essential to France's welfare in regard to hoped-for and much-needed food supplies.'

It is pointed out by the Cornell Daily Sun that "with France unwillingly, or otherwise, lining up with the Axis powers, the question of her colonies has come back into the news. President Roosevelt is reported to have warned the Vichy government that further signs of military co-operation between Germany and France may result in this country seizing Martinique and French Guiana. But there are other elements in our affairs with France. Most important, there is Dakar, in French West Africa, a port which an offened France might turn over to Germany. This base on the South Atlantic, some 1,800 miles from Brazil, in event of an Axis victory would be a seat of operations for any attempt at penetration of this hemisphere. It is, of course, out of the question for our navy to go over to Africa and occupy every potential 'enemy' point of operations. Nevertheless, the fact remains that the president will have to consider the role of Dakar, in any decision which will determine future relations with France." Thus, while formal United States friendship for France continues, the concensus of collegiate editorial thought is that Germany will tighten its iron grip on France and that the prostrate Vichy government will be forced to assume a key role in Hitler's attempt at world rev-

American Publishing Trends

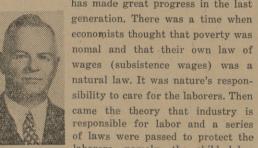

A RECENT SURVEY in The Publisher's Weekly shows that in 1940, less than half as many books on Philosophy and Ethics were published in the United States as in 1920. This, however, was the only class of books which did not increase. Games iness 139%; Biography, 127%; Sociology and Economics, 121%; Fine Arts, 122%; Science, 113%; Agriculture, 107%; Music, 101%; Technical books, as a good, light-hearted musical. There is spying and counter-73%; Philology, 63%; Poetry and Drama, 62%; History, 58%; Fiction, 54%.

Every man may interpret these figures in his Irene. As a society clothes model, English gentlemen stop in the tensown fashion. To your writer, it is disheartening to note that America is absorbing fewer and fewer books of philosophy and ethics. It makes him wonder if the schools and colleges are producing or even trying to produce good and thoughtful human beings, equipped and habituated to seeing life steadily and seeing it whole. He wonders also, however, whether other types of literature (such as drama, biography, and fiction) do not nowadays contain more "philosophy and ethics" than they used to. If this is true, dipping dance number to the tune is always interesting. then the drop in the number of books specifically in of "Alice Blue Gown." The tune this field need not be quite so alarming.

LABOR STRIKES retard the National Defense Program. Organized and often unorganized laborers go on strike as a last resort to obtain higher wages. Other demands of labor, such as better working conditions and shorter working days, have been secured either by state or national legislation. Labor that Anna models for but that is sibility to care for the laborers. Then came the theory that industry is responsible for labor and a series of laws were passed to protect the laborers, namely, the child labor law, the workmen's compensation status of labor. In 1936 the Democratic Party platform stated, "We hold this truth to be self-evidentthat the government in a modern civilization has certain inescapable obligations to its citizens, among which are: (1) Protection of the family and home; (2) Establishment of democracy of opportunity for all the people; (3) Aid to those overtaken by disaster." The present administration has accepted the "inescapable obligation" in regard to labor. The

Wagner Relations Act, the Wages and Hours Act, and the Social Security Act tend to strengthen labor's position as an important factor in our economic life. Even the injunction has been brushed aside as a corrective measure against striking laborers. Forty-eight million wage-earners, many of them voters, are worth catering to if one wants to win an election. During an industrial pick-up strikes are a normal condition, but during the present crisis strikes should be, and can be, minimized. Efforts are already under way to improve labor-employer relations

Our Diplomatic Front Is Active. President Roosevelt broke another precedent and went out into Chesapeake Bay to welcome Lord Halifax, Britain's new envoy. It was a friendly gesture by our chief executive to the English people. Such diplomatic acts on the part of responsible officials often definitely influence the relationships of nations. What President Roosevelt can not do in person he does through personal emisarries. Col. William Donovan ("Wild Bill" Donovan) is now somewhere in the Near East. Has been with the British forces on the African front, and has, also, visited the Balkan capitals and had interviews with the leading statesmen there. He is likely conveying messages to these people to the effect that the U.S. will aid England with all possible speed. Harry Hopkins is in London to find out the most effective ways by which we can help England. Lanchlin Currie is in China and has conferred with Chiang Kai-shek concerning economic aid to China in her war against Japan. A word of warning or encouragement here and there with Germany, has little choice but to may forestall or even prevent military action. to whatever terms may be offered by the Diplomacy is our first line of national defense.
