Dr. F. J. Tibbitts will be a visiting professor in the education department. He is connected with the University of Oklahoma and is a director of guidance projects of the State of Oklahoma. He has had extensive experience as teacher and counsellor.

The dairy husbandry department will receive Dr. C. W. Turner, who is one of the leading authorities in the United States on the physiology and genetics of milk secretion. His research work at the University of Missouri has contributed much to our knowledge of hormones and their effect on the growth and functioning of the mammary gland. Dr. Turner has been with the University of Missouri since 1920 holding the position of professor of dairy husbandry at that institution.

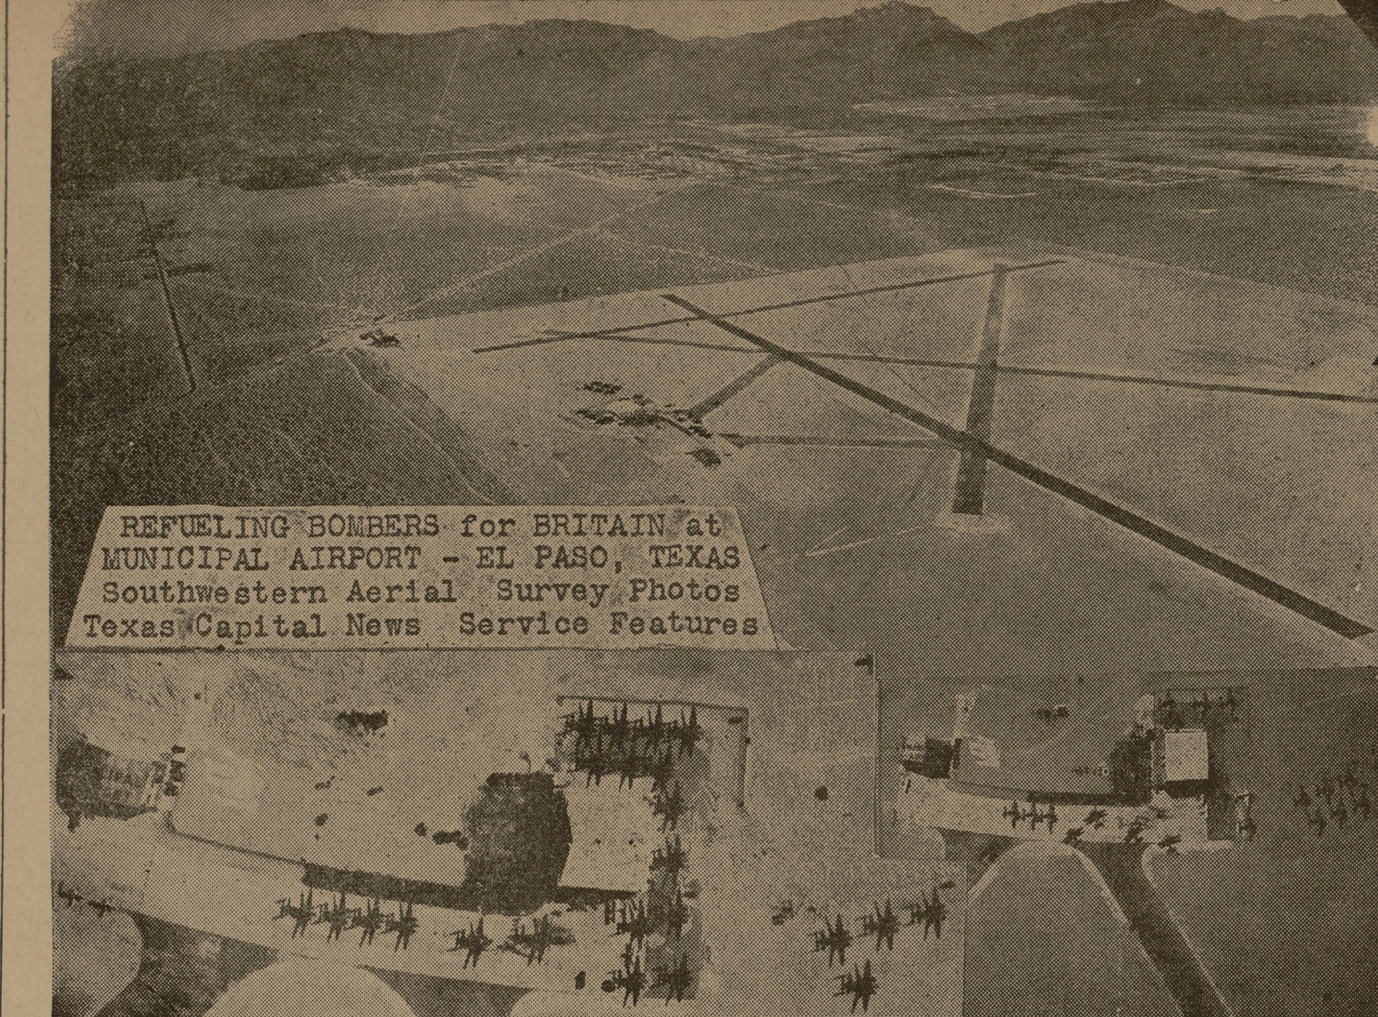

Another professor who will instruct at A. & M. during the summer session is Mr. Ed. N. Wentworth, who will teach with the animal husbandry department. Mr. Wentworth is Director of the Livestock Bureau of Armour and Company and is internationally recognized as an authority in the field of livestock marketing. He holds two degrees from Iowa State College and has studied at Cornell and Harvard Universities. He formerly taught at Iowa State college, Chicago Veterinary college and Kansas State college. He has been director of Armour's Livestock Bureau since 1923.

in Latin America, and tell the truth about Latin America in the United States.

"Politicians and diplomats, who were the early contacts contributed little. About all they endeavored to do was skim off the South. Tourists who visited the Latin American republics checked their inhibitions at the border and gave those people a strange impression of us. American motion pictures gave a distorted impression to Latin Americans.

"The only sane basis for true cooperation with Latin American countries is a definite understanding beforehand of what we both are going to get out of it.

"Recently there have been definite indications that there will be a revolutionary change in attitudes. One indication of this fact came to light recently when a representative of our government sent back a report which mentioned not one word about commercial possibilities, but devoted much space to the opportunities for research along many lines of scientific endeavor. That is the basis for better cultural relations with Latin America.

"How many Americans can name all of the republics to the south of us? How many can the capitals of those republics? It will be the little things that will impress those people with our interest in more friendly and trusting relations. Such things are not spectacular, they are sound; the day of the spectacular overture is past. The spectacular overtures created distrust and suspicions. We will find a sane approach to this vital problem.

cial motion pictures in Europe. After returning to America he decided to take a trip around the world and take more moving pictures. He went broke on the Isle of Gurnsey but managed to return to America with his pictures.

From a fatherless boy he rose to become President of Brady International Enterprises at the age of 25. At its last International Convention he was chosen by Rotary Clubs to speak for American youth.

His object in speaking to the corps is to tell of many of his handicaps through life and how he overcame them. To tell of many of his experiences and how he has been self supporting since childhood.

Fifty cameramen attending a short course at Kent State university got a practical workout on action pictures when a fire broke out near the campus.

Political science students at the University of Vermont recently attended town meetings throughout the state to further their studies of government.

Latin-Americans To Take Part in Conference Here

A feature of the conference on Latin-American relations being held at A. & M. May 12-14 will be participation of students from the various Latin-American countries, according to J. Wheeler Barger, head of the department of agricultural economics, who is in charge.

The conference is being conducted by the college under the sponsorship of the fourth district, Texas Federation of Women's clubs.

The Latin-American students have been invited to dine with the club women, who will have their meals in a group during the conference, and to take an active part in the discussions following special talks.

Students who will be on the program include Daniel Comepo of Venezuela, Miguel Soto of Porto Rico, Xavier Fernandez, Gabino Fajardo and Gustav Carlesen of Peru and Porforio Cadena of Mexico.

In addition to A. & M. College faculty members, Miss Fletcher Ryan Wickham of Dallas and Dr. John C. Patterson of Washington, will be lecturers. Dr. Patterson is senior specialist in inter-American educational relations of the U. S. office of education. Miss Wickham is an authority on Mexico and a Spanish teacher in the Dallas public schools.

Eighty-Five Boys Compete in Future Farmer Contests Here

Area III, Future Farmers of America, composed of 47 high schools offering vocational agriculture to students and having active F.F.A. Chapters, sponsored a series of contests on different phases of leadership here at A. & M. last Saturday. Approximately 85 boys were competitors in these contests.

The winners of the contests were as follows: Bremond and Bay City chapters, winners in the Chapter conducting contest; Slocum and Crosby, winners in public speaking contests; Bellville and Franklin, winners in the news writing contest; Caldwell and Columbus, winners of the one act farm demonstration; and Bellville, the winner of the sweepstakes award.

Horticulture Picnic Will be Held May 15

The Horticulture society will have their annual spring picnic at 5 p. m. on May 15 at the Cashion cabin.

At the picnic, officers for the Horticulture society will be elected for the coming year. Games will be played and the event will climax with a steak fry.

The officers of the Horticulture society for the present year are as follows: E. L. Pewett, president; Herman Jenkins, vice-president; Felix Scott, secretary-treasurer, and Carroll Counts, sergeant of arms.

Hillsboro Women To Represent Texas

The farmer members of the State Land Use Planning Committee, which is holding a two-day session at A. & M., has named Mrs. Iola Scott Middleton of Hillsboro to represent Texas at a conference on health and nutrition for defense to be held at the White House on May 26, 27, and 28.

The conference, according to word from Paul V. McNutt, Administrator of the Federal Security Agency, was called by President Roosevelt to assist in formulating a national nutrition policy in organizing a program of action.

Mrs. Middleton, mother of two sons and two daughters, lives about two miles from Hillsboro on the same farm where she was born. Her husband is a successful dairy farmer. She attended Texas State College for Women before her marriage, and in recent years has been active in women's home demonstration club work. She formerly was president of the Jesse Women's Home Demonstration Club, chairman of the Hill County Home Demonstration Council and is now chairman of the mattress-making committee in the county.

Vet Pathology 314 To be Summer Course

Veterinary pathology 314 will be offered during the first semester of summer school, Professor R. Clark Dunn, head of the department of veterinary pathology and bacteriology has announced.

The course will be supervised by Assistant Professor John H. Milliff who is already contacting eligible students concerning the course.

Lectures on the special systematic pathology and morbid anatomy of the different organs and systems of organs will make up the work of most of the course. The pathology of various infectious and contagious diseases is considered. The practice includes the demonstration of museum and fresh specimens and an introduction to post-mortem technique.

A ship model testing tank has been built at the University of California.

Poultry Department Plans Judging Meet

The second annual poultry judging contest sponsored by the poultry husbandry department will be held Saturday at the college poultry farm, D. H. Reid, head of the department, announced this week.

Freshmen and sophomores who took Poultry Husbandry 201 last semester or are taking it this semester are eligible to enter the contest which begins at 8 o'clock Saturday morning.

The classes to be judged will include six exhibition classes, three production classes, and a class of ten market birds. Rhode Island red, barred rocks, and white leghorns will be the breeds to be judged.

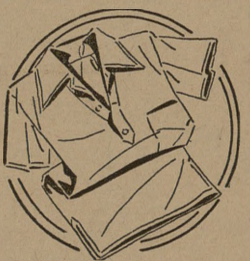

The three high men in the contest will be awarded medals.
