Board Meet
the board that the army was sending the College 24 additional horses and ten motor trucks and that the stables were not ample enough to take care of the additional animals. He pointed out that with a WPA project the proper stables with a rifle range could be constructed at a cost of $27,500 to the College. The board said that they would seriously consider his request.

Among other things the board also approved the request of the Feeding and Breeding station that it be allowed to construct a swine farrow building and a turkey nutrition building out of funds that have already been appropriated, an appropriation of $200 for intramural awards to student managers, alteration of several of the contracts that have been let in connection with the proposed four dormitories.

country people with their barter system of exchange, the Japanese colonies and the United States defense units. Brady said that the defense was much better than most people believed. Then they went to the Orient proper.

The things that impressed Brady most were the good food and the women. "The Chinese women really know how to treat a man. They treat you very graciously!" When Brady visited a friend the man's daughter fed them because they could not use chopsticks. "The Chinese eat things that are not only good but also look good," said Brady.

The Chinese attitude toward the war is "there are lots of them and they are going to fight on." The war is like a well that keeps caving in. The Japanese have lost their face in China and as a result the Chinese are becoming more united. From China they went to Singapore.

With $20 between them Brady and his companion landed a job as master of ceremonies in a cabaret for two weeks. The first week they held a jitterbug contest. The second week a beauty contest was held. Brady said there was more color, more life and more interest in that cabaret than in any of the Hollywood studios. At the beauty contest they met the crown prince of Jahora and were invited to be his guest. Brady and his companion very soon and treated with the next day went to Jahora only to be thrown in jail. It was only a mistake and they were released very soon and treated with the best of Orient hospitality. They not only visited the magnificent palace but also the royal hunting lodge. Then they went to Java and proceeded with the assignment of interviewing the sultan behind the Mountains of the Moon.

To get in Java they were supposed to have $150 but only had $70. By putting up a big front they got in. They crossed the mountains only to be refused admittance both by the government and guards. By investigation they met a friend, a shopkeeper, of the Sultan's. This friend called the Sultan over the phone and Brady talked to the Sultan and told him what he wanted. Much to Brady's surprise the Sultan was a camera field. The next morning the Sultan let them in and exhibited his pictures. He let them take all the pictures they wanted.

Brady was impressed by the way the people prostrated themselves before the Sultan. The Sultan noticed Brady's amazement and said, "It seems strange to you and just as strange to me but I have to put up with it." The Sultan gets a million guilders a year just to do nothing. Brady said that in the harem were some of the wives of the Sultan's grandfather and weren't so pretty, but there was also the other kind too. In spite of all this the Sultan wanted to leave them without a cent. With their assignment filled they started home.

After visiting Australia they worked on a freighter for passage back to the States.

TEXAS HAS LARGEST VETERINARY SCHOOL—The School of Veterinary Medicine at Texas A & M College, one of ten such institutions in the United States, and two in Canada, is the largest in North America. Here you see the Aggie future "hoss doctors" in action. Upper left, removing a growth from a cow's head. Upper right, autopsy on a pig. Lower left, a laboratory section in the study of heart action of animals with pulse beats automatically recorded on charts. Lower right, students investigate the inner workings of fowls.

Events Reviewed
The Campus Theater's case was filed April 16. The case contends that the Jefferson Amusement Company has a financial interest in the Bryan theaters (as booking agent) and, further, that the Palace and Queen theaters in Bryan have 30 to 45 days clearance over College Station.

This clearance, the complaint holds, is unreasonable because College Station and Bryan are separately incorporated municipalities. The demand for arbitration asks that this clearance be eliminated or adjusted to a reasonable basis.

Outcome a Question
Dallas motion picture executives—looking on from the side-lines as interested spectators—were non-committal when asked their opinion concerning the possibility of the cadets' success in the undertaking.

"That's a difficult question to answer," one of them who preferred to remain unknown declared, "because the consent decree is entirely new to the motion picture world and no one can yet tell how the thing will act."

RS Department Leads Southwest
The Texas A. & M. college department of rural sociology is the largest in the southwest in number of majors, total number of students and in size of teaching staff, figures just released by the Southwestern Sociological Society indicate.

The figures covered six states—Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Colorado. More than 600 students are enrolled in the various courses of the department and 80 students are taking their major study in rural sociology.

Dr. Daniel Russell, head of the department is president of the Texas Social Workers association for the second successive year.

tain Sid McDonald and Carl Maloney two each, and Jack Buie scored a single point for A. & M. Hart started at number one position, Maloney at number two, Braid at number three, and McDonald in the number four spot. After hostilities were well under way, Norris McGowan relieved Hart, and Buie went into the fray to give a rest to Maloney.

Lampasas' lineup was composed of the Gillen brothers and father at three of the positions and Jimmie Burr of Austin filling the absent Bill Kirkendall's place. Kirkendall was unable to be present for the tilt. Burr was relieved by Yager of Austin. Dyke Gillen, James Gillen, and Mr. Gillen scored one goal each to account for the Lampasas total.

Sunning with tremendous agility and speed, the widely publicized diminutive pony of the Lampasas club lived up to expectations with an amazing exhibition. He was ridden by James Gillen and his presence added to the enjoyment of a large gathering of fans. He outran and outmaneuvered other mounts with ease.

Refereeing the contest was Lieutenant Bill North, U. S. Cavalry, and Jack Hays of the University of California announced.

Barlow Elected
of the Civilian Pilot Training Program, came from Washington, D. C. to attend the meeting and spoke on the contemplated program for the coming year. Webster said that approximately ten thousand young men over the nation will receive primary flight training this summer. In addition he predicted there would be 3,500 men engaged in secondary training and about two thousand taking training to become flight instructors. Webster pointed out that the appropriation bill, which will establish the funds to operate this program, is now before Congress, and, although, definite plans cannot be announced until the bill is passed, the CPT personnel felt that they would not be disappointed in the result.

President Walton of A. & M. was the principal speaker on the program and addressed the luncheon meeting giving the "Educator's Viewpoint of Aviation Training." Dr. Walton praised the CPT Program and explained that he regarded it as sound academically. He said he felt that aviation would either make or break our civilization and probably would make it. He added that there would always be a demand for men trained in aviation.

Plans are now being made for giving the summer flight training at A. & M., and application blanks for primary and secondary training are now available in the office of the Department of Aeronautical Engineering. It is necessary that all of those who contemplate taking this training apply immediately.
