Another Milestone for A&M

Official dedication of the Easterwood Airport was held Thursday afternoon following a dress review of the A. & M. cadet corps. Named for Jesse L. Easterwood, A. & M. ex-student killed in an accident shortly after the close of World War I, the airport is a major part of the recent building program inaugurated by the college.

He remarked that the College Park Community Council is asking each property owner in College Park who has property on a hard surface street to assess against himself voluntarily a sum equal to 4c per running foot on hard surfaced streets.

"If this arrangement is agreeable," suggested Mr. Adams, "Please send the check covering your assessment to Mr. I. G. Adams, Faculty Exchange, Box 263, Campus. If you do not own the property where you live, kindly notify me giving the name and address of the owner."

"The old Community Council is still functioning," stated Adams, "pending the disposition of all funds given to its care. As previously provided, when all funds are properly disbursed the Council will render a statement of its affairs and cease functioning."

Still fearing that the worst is yet to come, the agronomy department has announced that the group, consisting of Robinson, Hartgraves (until June 19), Butler, and Professor L. M. Thompson as leader, will leave College Station May 31, and will return July 5, meanwhile covering a good portion of the middle western states and part of Canada inspecting many industrial plants.

Otheil Erlund, Ben Ivey, Edward Kubin and Miguel Soto played a number of musical selections for the entertainment of those present. "Doc" Russell spoke briefly thanking the boys for the praise and for the honor accorded him. He also gave the present financial status of the houses and reported that the Van Zandt County house leads in grade point averages with a rating of 1.51 for the spring semester.

dents and turn it all into an Air Corps post," the general said.

Accompanying General Brant was Lt. Col. H. W. Holden, A. C., who was in Coco Sola, Canal Zone and was a personal friend of Lieut. Easterwood. He witnessed the accident which cost Easterwood his life and said that "Red", as he called him, was one of the finest gentlemen he ever had the pleasure to know, and on top of that he was a fine pilot. "That is a rather big statement when the rivalry between the Army and the Navy is considered", he added.

Also in the official Randolph Field party were Major Carl R. Storrie, graduate of A. & M. and personal pilot for General Brant, and Major W. J. Clinch.

Appropriate Name

In designating Easterwood Field as the name of the new airport Dr. T. O. Walton said that in looking for an appropriate name for the field that a search had been made of all past classes to find a son of A. & M. who had distinguished himself far above all others in his field and in Lieut. Easterwood had found just that man. "He was fearless, a fine specimen of manhood, an outstanding aviator and was beloved by all his fellow men", Dr. Walton said.

In naming the field he dedicated it to the service of not only the college but also to the State of Texas, the Nation, and Democracy at large.

Unveiling

Miss Easterwood, escorted by Cadet Colonel William A. Becker, then unveiled the monument as the Aggie band played "The Spirit of Aggie Land" and B Company, Infantry, Lieut. Easterwood's old organization at the college, saluted their distinguished member.

Owing to uncertain weather conditions the announced flight of planes from Randolph and Brooks Field was cancelled but planes from the Kadet Aviation Company, operators of the training school at Easterwood Field flew over the field as the ceremonies were being carried out.

Session Will Start Week Early in Sept

The regular session of school for the next long session will begin one week earlier than this school year, E. J. Howell, registrar, announced yesterday. This announcement followed the release of the school calendar for the next session.

Present plans for next fall for entrance examinations to be held Monday, September 8. Registration of new students will begin Wednesday, Sept. 10. Old students will register the following Thursday. Classes for the new semester will begin on Friday, Sept. 12.

"We believe this system will encourage many more eligible young men to enter cadet training with the U. S. Army Air Corps," Lieutenant Williford said.

Examining headquarters will be open at eight a. m. Monday and applicants may obtain complete information there at any time. Headquarters is located at room 37 Ross hall.

The flight officer said a "team captain" will be chosen soon to aid in contacting students in the college and to lead the group when it is organized.

He added that he believed several units may be activated among the ranks of Texas A. & M. students.

Informal conferences at which details of cadet training will be explained are to be arranged soon in dormitories and campus meeting places, the officer declared.

Physical Surveys Chief Teaches At Summer School Again

According to Dean E. J. Kyle, one of the professors who will be on the teaching staff during the coming summer session is E. A. Norton, chief of the physical surveys division, Soil Conservation, Washington, D. C.

Norton is well known all over the United States, and abroad for his work in soil classification and physical surveys. This summer will see his second distinguished course project on the A. & M. campus. Last summer he had what was claimed to be one of the best short courses in the physical surveys work in the United States.

The course this year will extend from July 21st to August 9th. It will cover the latest work in soil conservation, morphological and genetic methods of soil study. This will be an opportunity for graduate students and seniors to attend not only the best instruction available on this subject, but also to have an association and inspiration from one of the best known authorities on soils in the world, Dean Kyle said.

Seniors Can Obtain Invitations Till Mon

Bill Becker, cadet colonel, announced yesterday that the seniors may obtain their senior invitations at the corps headquarters office today and Monday. The receipt slips must be presented in order to obtain the invitations.
