sparcs any puches all the way through. That is, up to the last. Then things change for better or worse. We haven't been able to decide just which.

Still sillier is "HOLD THAT GHOST" showing at the Campus tomorrow and Monday. The perpetual cut-ups, Abbott and Costello, have turned out another for the customers before their popularity begins to wane. The Andrews Sisters and Ted Lewis and his orchestra have the opening and closing numbers in the show. Their part is fine, but there just isn't enough of it.

A ghost or two gets loose and scares everyone, especially Costello. But the laughs far outnumber the screams. This is one show that romance is at a minimum. Everyone else takes a back seat when Messrs. A. & C. start. There isn't room for both, so romance gets the gate.

Utter devotion to a job is expressed by Martha Scott as an English teacher in an American university and to a woman by William Gargan who waits for a lifetime to marry Martha, but never puts his proposal over. The story is entitled "CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP" and will be shown at Guion Hall Monday.

Martha enters the picture as a girl of nineteen just entering college. The end finds her retired from teaching at the same school 51 year later. All the time Gargan tries to tell her of his love, but he can't seem to make it quite impressive enough. She falls in love with several other men, but all these affairs don't materialize. After she is retired from her position with honors, she realizes that she has overlooked the real enjoyment of life in her zealous devotion to her job as a teacher.

president were Edward Roeder, Frank Wagenhauser, Jack Orrick and John Pennington. Roeder, of Machine-Gun Troop Cavalry, tallied over 700 votes, with Orrick his closest competitor.

The Corps of Engineers' candidates won the next two positions, with Paul McBride of F Company and George Manousos of E Company winning the secretary and treasurer races respectively. Others nominated for secretary were Fred Nesmith, Barney Grimm and John L. Horton. Besides Manousos, Tom Kamos and Marvin Kautsch were nominated for treasurer.

The chief function of the freshmen as a class will be the annual Fish Ball to be held in early spring.

As a result, the cards are still in the local post office and may be secured by "Bean."
