Speaking on the Campus Don't Let This Tradition Die

A recent Open Forum letter grabbed the bull by the horns when it stated that one Aggie tradition seems to be slipping by the wayside. All the more important because it is one tradition which makes A. & M. distinctive, the habit of speaking to everyone on the campus is well worth keeping.

A cheerful "howdy" or "hello" which greets a person while walking across the campus is a tradition worth hanging on to. Take any other college in Texas and analyze it to see if it has that same friendly, democratic atmosphere. A. & M. seems to be unique in this respect; our custom of speaking represents more than a mere verbal greeting; it is indicative of a greater Aggie

At times there seems to be a gradual decay of this tradition. You still hear greetings on the campus, but that spirit is lacking. The Aggie way of doing things is exemplified in the manner in which every cadet, senior or fish, speaks on the campus.

Of all A. & M. traditions, few are more valuable than this habit. Some of those students, the upperclassmen, who should more fully realize the benefits of this tradition are the ones that fail to live up to it. This tradition can not be based on compulsion; it must be a free expression from all.

Next time while walking across the campus remember that a friendly greeting is a tradition worth preserving and one that helps you.

college students is biblically illiterate. They might easily be classified as seniors in chemkindergarden.

True, the "textbook" of our largest religious groups, the Bible, has been a perennial best-seller, but unfortunately, all Bible-owners are not Bible-readers. Perhaps this is due in part to the out-dated method of printing itself. It is certainly difficult to enjoy reading when you continually stumble over ancient divisions of chapters and verses, and where naturally beautiful language is cramped into monotonous prosaic style. The King James Version (sometimes called the Authorized Version) is appreciated greatly for its Elizabethan English, but over three hundred years of educational and cultural change have made its important message difficult for many of us.

There are now available different versions of both Old and New Testaments, each prepared for specific purposes, and intended to fill different needs.

Increased study of history, language, and archaeology since 1611 have necessitated a number of changes to insure authenticity even at the sacrifice of beautiful expressions. Poetry, drama, and personal correspondence have been presented as such, and mechanical separation by verses has been replaced by paragraph indentations and quotation marks. Most of us don't pretend to be scholars, so this type of aid should increase our understanding and enjoyment as readers of the Book of Books.

The Bible is being rediscovered by an increasing number of people. Besides being a literary example of the "survival of the fittest," it still offers a solution to the world's numerous headaches and to the individual's quest for a satisfactory way of

The World Turns On

_____ By Dr. R. W. Steen _____

A large portion of the non-Russian people in Europe fear communism, and the German propaganda agencies have been working overtime to make the attack of Russia appear to these people as a crusade against Communism. If successful, this propaganda campaign would reduce opposition to the Germans in the conquered countries by uniting all Europeans in a campaign with the Germans as leaders. The plan has not as yet succeeded, and it is doubtful that it will. The people fear Nazism also, and it is human nature to worry more about a present evil than a prospective one.

The world cheered the heroic resistance offered by the Finns when they were attacked by the Rus-America's sympathies were almost entirely with the small country, and there were many Americans who made themselves believe that Finland might win. She was finally crushed by overwhelming numbers. When the opportunity came to join with Germany and regain her territory Finland renewed the war against Russia, and in a short time reoccupied the territory taken from her last winter.

America and Britain were willing to see Finland regain her lands, but disliked seeing her as an ally of Germany. America has re-cently been insisting that Finland withdraw from the conflict. This statement is in marked contrast to the reports coming from Berlin when the American request was made known there. A separate peace with the Finns would improve the Russian position, ne degree would weaken the search for knowledge, the present group of Germans. It now remains to be seen whether or not Finland can make a separate peace. There is reason to doubt that Finland can istry, juniors in engineering, or as soph- move independently of German wishes, and omores in biology; but in the area of religion certainly the Germans will oppose any Finmany of them haven't even left the stage of nish peace with Russia at this time. Where The Aggies Stand

Beware freshmen, sophomores, juniors; That shaded section is the senior section! From the 50 yard line to past the goal line the 6,000 members of the Twelfth Man will watch the Aggie Maroon and White roll on during 1941's football season. The senior section will extend from the 50 to the 15 yard line from row 24, just behind the ramps, up. The junior section will encircle the senior section on three sides. Sophomores and freshmen will be in front of the upperclassmen besides having a section of their own past the goal line.
