Gymnasiums, Auditoriums And Park Buildings Among WPA Constructions

WPA workers have built or expanded 3,442 public buildings in Texas, an average of more than thirteen structures for each of the state's 254 counties, it was reported today by State Work Projects Administrator H. P. Drought in a review summarizing six years of accomplishments by the Federal agency.

Headed by 646 completed school buildings, the list of construction and rehabilitation work finished by WPA workers included such items as 577 gymnasiums, auditoriums and park buildings and 87 municipal and county administration buildings.

Still a standout among single items of work accomplished under the WPA program, Drought said, is that of road building which extends into all but two of the counties of Texas. Ninety per cent of the 29,546 miles of WPA-improved roads serve largely rural areas, criss-crossing the state in a network connecting major state highways.

did not let up for a single minute. The Rice Institute band and Aggie band provided entertainment for the spectators during the game. Just before the game began the Rice band paraded on the field and played the "Star Spangled Banner" while the capacity crowd of 30,000 stood at attention.

At the half the famous Aggie band proceeded on the field and went into their famous marching routine. In their first formation they formed the word "Rice" and switched into the word "Owls", playing the Rice fight song all the while. Facing the Aggie section, the band formed "Texas Aggies," playing the Aggie war hymn.

The Rice Institute band followed the Aggie band on the field. Playing the Aggie war hymn they formed "Aggies" and then "Owls" with a rendition of the Rice fight song.

Soon after the beginning of the second half the public address system announcer surprised the spectators with the fact that the Texas-T.C.U. game was tied at seven-all. With a minute left in the game the Aggie Cadet Corps gleefully gave "Lizzie," the A. & M. victory yell, and settled down with the satisfaction of knowing that the Cadets had hung up their eighth consecutive victory of the year.

How the Fighting Aggies trounced the Owls 19-6 in their fifth straight conference victory and retained the undisputed conference lead is now history, and everyone is pointing to the Texas game with a gleam in his eye.

Immediately after the conclusion of the game in Rice Stadium the loud speaker was turned on to the Texas-T.C.U. game and the spectators heard those last eighteen seconds which were so fatal to the Steers. The Aggies and followers went wild with joy when they heard the news of the Texas defeat.

The finish of the game marked the opening of the victory celebration which lasted far into the night. The Aggies were happy with two thoughts in their minds—the Aggie victory and the Texas defeat.

And so ended the Houston Corps Trip. The Aggies gloriously advanced themselves nearer to football fame—the surprise team of the Southwest conference—and the corps will never forget the Houston Corps Trip and the defeat of Rice, 1941.

vancement and industrial improvement, an awakening is taking place to the south and our Spanish speaking neighbors are gradually taking over their own industries.

Contrary to the argument of many economists, the United States does need Latin American agricultural products. Our coffee, rubber, tobacco, chicle (for chewing gum), and even sugar and tea come from South and Central America. They also need and want our flour, beans, apples, and lettuce. They want to buy our industrial products. Says Isidoro Fabela, president of the Mexican Free World association, "... The United States should reach an agreement with the southern republics to buy their raw materials and to sell to them, in return, on an equitable basis, such commodities as they need."

If Hitler wins in Europe, Latin American trade with Europe will be open only to Nazi terms. Therefore, it will be necessary for the western hemisphere to work out a system whereby this continent can make use of its resources for the benefit of the people who live on it. We must be self sufficient!
