U. is given a nod over Baylor. Texas and A. & M. are idle this weekend in anticipation of their traditional Thanksgiving battle.
Dartmouth visits the Deep South for the first time to play Georgia, and probably go down in defeat.

Those sometimes amazing Morgans of Saint Mary's travel across the country to play Fordham in New York. Although this annual affair has often ended up cockeyed, the Rams rating of 93.0 seems very safe this time over Saint Mary's 85.4.
Navy will bounce back and down Princeton; Auburn should beat Villanova. Among other games the predictions should run true to form with San Francisco over San Jose; Oregon over Washington, and unbeaten Minnesota to run at will against Wisconsin.

Mississippi has a rating of 95.7 and plays Arkansas at 86.0 down in Dixie. Remembering former upsets in this series, perhaps Ole Miss will be lucky to win by one point.

Harvard Business School Offering National Defense Training Courses

Dean Wallace B. Donham of the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University, announced today a special session of defense courses to be held at the Business School, beginning January 26, 1942. This special session will include two courses of study:
1. A special 12 months' course training men for production work in defense industries. Dean Donham in making the announcement said, "Faced with the necessity to increase production of vital material in defense industries this country is faced with a shortage of young men trained in factory problems for junior supervisory jobs.
