Ag's One-Man Team Tactics Don't Bring Results; Henderson Accounts for Most Points

Arkansas' two game triumph over the Texas Aggies leaves Coach Marty Karow's quintet far behind and their only consolation left is to defeat the teams of the second bracket, T.C.U., S.M.U., and Texas.

I'm not sure that the Cadets can accomplish even that feat if they resort to the same playing tactics they so consistently used last Saturday night. There is no doubt that they were over-strained by their brilliant exhibition the night before when they came within six points of defeating the league-leading Razorbacks.

It's the same old story—that of a team too dependent on the exploits of one individual. Look at the box score Saturday. You see Henderson with 21 points, which is one point more than half of the Aggie score. The rest of the points are thinly (and I mean thinly) divided among the other members. But when you look on the other you see Adams with 17 markers, Pitts with 12, Honea with 9 and so forth. Time and time again, it was shown that a basketball team needs the help of all five men, and Saturday or even Friday, it was no different. Just imagine what would happen if Jarrett, Nabors, Cokinos, or Bayer would get hot and collaborate with Henderson in scoring some points. I dare say that the Cadets would be leading the league today.

As for Arkansas, Coach Glen Rose has a team that has its score almost equally divided between its cagers. Adams was the firecracker Friday, and Saturday it was a substitute named Bob Honea who grabbed the scoring honors.

That's far from being the case as far as the Cadets are concerned. I've never seen a box score this year where Henderson wasn't the high point man for the Ags, but that doesn't seem to win games. Sure, the boys hustle and fight as hard as any team in the league—that's shown by the closeness of their battles—but that alone isn't enough to cop victories. You have to produce a five-man team and not a one-man team to win in this league!

Sports Squibs From Here And There; Dope on Rule Confusing Play Sat Night

... Here is some enlightening dope on the rule-confusing play in the game Saturday night... it occurred when Bob Honea of Arkansas shot for the hoop, with the ball hitting the rim and remaining stationary... Henderson came in and batted the ball down, at the same time touching the hoop... the specific rule states that two points will be counted when a player touches any part of the hoop while the ball is spinning or stationary on the rim of the hoop... that comes from the basketball rules, Marty... And those who booed Ab Curtis should rather feel apologetic because Ab did call a good game... T. A. Scott, promising freshman back, has withdrawn from school... Freshman Basketball Star Buddy Moore showed much promise in developing into a major cage threat in the Allen game... he scored 20 points, and is considered by Coach Manning Smith as a clever ball handler and a good shooter... Little Bobby Williams is still producing in practice... his sterling play has caused smiles on the part of Coach Homer Norton and the coaching staff... The A. & M. T Club is readying preparations for Sports Day February 21... at present, plans call for a regulation game between the regulars and the reserves, and exhibition relay contest between the Varsity and Freshman track teams... an intra-squad baseball game is still uncertain because of the short training period of the players so far, but President Pete Henry is still trying... Don't forget this date—February 21... It's Sports Day...

Aggies Prep For Clash with TCU, SMU This Weekend

Ark Gains Undisputed Conference Lead After Defeating Cadets Twice

The Texas Aggie cagers are working hard this week in preparation for next Friday night's clash with the T. C. U. Horned Frogs. Coach Hub McQuillen's basketballers have returned out to be the surprise team of the loop. Rated only an outside chance to finish in the first division, the Horned Frogs have been battling for first place since the opening of the season.

Last Thursday night's loss to Rice knocked them out of a tie with Arkansas for first place, but they are still within striking distance of the loop leaders and will provide a tough evening for Coach Marty Karow's maroon and white clad boys.

After their battle with the Horned Frogs Friday night, the Aggies tangle with the weak but dangerous S. M. U. Mustangs the cellar team of the conference. The Mustangs have yet to win their first conference clash this season, but would like nothing better to upset the Aggies.

The Arkansas Razorbacks gained undisputed possession of the conference lead last week-end by virtue of their two triumphs over the Aggies. The towering Razorbacks proved to be more than a match for Coach Karow's Aggies, and though they were hard pressed in both encounters won handily, to put them a full game ahead of the second place Rice Owls.

Intramurals

By Dub Oxford

By Mike Mann

A "Sports Circus" will be staged between the halves of the Aggie-T.C.U. game next Friday night. Men possessing ability in either ping pong or badminton are needed to round out the show. Any one who wishes to participate should see Spike White at the gym as soon as possible.

Class A and B Wrestling will not begin until after the conclusion of the varsity basketball season, but all those who plan to participate must report to the intramural office this week. The intramural department has announced the schedule for the weighing-in of all intramural wrestlers. All men who expect to enter the events must report to the intramural club room between 5:00 and 7:00 p.m. or between 8:00 and 10:00 p.m., according to the schedule listed below.

Tuesday, Feb. 17, Coast Artillery and Field Artillery.

Wednesday, Feb. 18, Infantry and Engineers.

Thursday, Feb. 19, all other organizations.

Maroon-White Feast Is Tonight

All Participating In Red Cross Tilt Urged To Attend

A banquet honoring the Aggie athletes who participated in the American Red Cross War Fund football game played at Kyle Field on January 17 will be held tonight in the banquet room of Sbis Hall at 8:00 p.m., Central War Time.

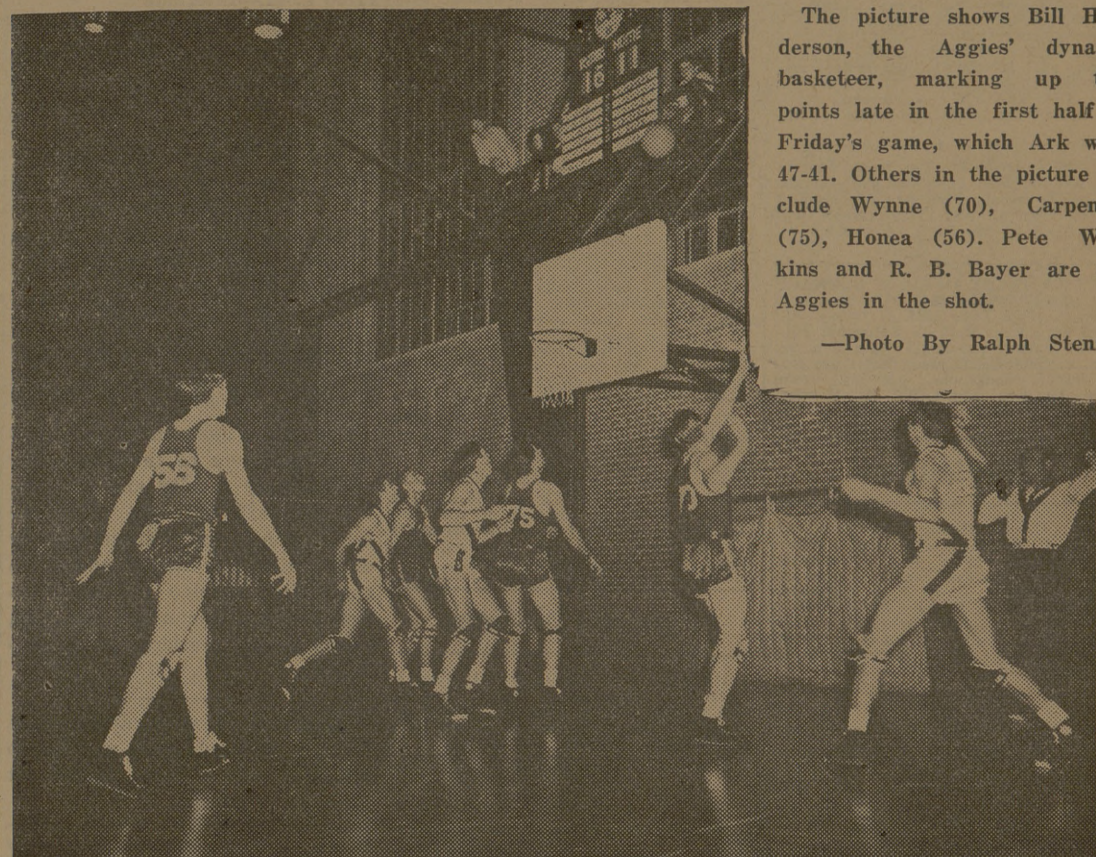

President T. O. Walton will make the main speech of the evening and a representative of the American Red Cross will be presented with $231, the net proceeds of the game, by Sponsors Tom Gillis, Dick Hervey and Mike Haikin.

All cadets who took part in the game are requested to be present at the banquet, at which time they will be presented with the medals in honor of their participation in the game. The Maroons were victorious over the Whites, with a score of 19-0.

It is hoped that this Red Cross game will become an annual affair in Aggieland. It received better-than-average support this year and continued support is expected.

Members of the Maroon team, coached by Bill Buchanan, were: T. J. Bennett, Ted O'Leary, Buddy White, Clarence Hester, J. W. Miller, B. F. Bolton, Dan Robinson, Pete Farmer, Al Aikman, J. M. Plyler, C. T. Schaedel, Vance Carrington, R. W. Baker, H. C. Bradford, Lloyd Sterling, K. T. Martin, J. W. Kiser, Earl Bemus, C. O. (See MAROON, Page 4)

Gridsters Show Well in Mud As Regulars Win 25-0 in Game Sat

By CHICK HURST

The specter which haunted the Texas Aggie coaches throughout the 1941 season, and which almost spelled disaster on a certain Saturday afternoon in Arkansas, is banished from the Aggie camp for the coming 1942 season.

The cry which took a few more hairs from Coach Norton's already thin thatch was the all important query "can the Aggies go in the mud?" Last Saturday afternoon with Kyle Field approaching the condition of a first class quagmire, the Aggie regulars defeated the reserves by a convincing count of 25-0 in the third intra-squad clash of 1942.

For two quarters the reserves matched the regulars in every department, and the halftime score stood at 0-0, but in the second half the regulars found their stride and rolled for four touchdowns and their third victory of the series.

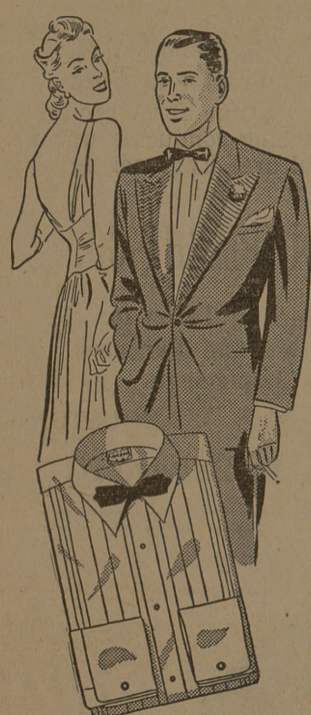

Bounding Bobby Williams started the fireworks early in the third period when he danced 42 yards to paydirt. Bobby's play was outstanding throughout the entire afternoon as he consistently ripped through the stout reserve defense.

Guard Wayne Cure set up the second regular tally when he blocked a reserve punt on the 19 yard line in the closing minutes of the third quarter. Two plays later Jake Webster smashed over right tackle for ten yards and the score. Once again the line smashing of Webster brought smiles to the faces of the coaching staff as time after time Jackson smashed through for much needed yardage.

The third touchdown came about as a result of a beautiful 63 yard gallop by freshman George Wilde early in the fourth quarter.

The fourth and final tally occurred late in the last quarter. The regulars gained possession of the (See FOOTBALL, Page 4)
