Olden Days of West Revived; Exchange Ave Comes to Life

Fort Worth's Exchange Avenue has come to life.

Any old cowhand knows what that means. It means boot heels and loud shirts, filled cafes and crowded sidewalks, for Exchange Avenue on Fort Worth's North Side is part and parcel of the Stock Show, which opened Friday March 13, for a 10 day run.

Fifty weeks of the year Exchange Avenue is quiet. An occasional load of cattle headed for the packing house rumbles down its rough bricks, but for the most part it is still.

Then something happens. The short little old street begins to stir. Uncle Andy Davis, the horn man, polishes his neckerchief slides and horns. He's been doing that at his sidewalk post on Exchange Avenue since 1896, the year of the first Stock Show.

The Maverick and Longhorn cafes and the Exchange Avenue hotels have begun to fill, where a week ago there were few customers. Cowboys and rodeo followers from all over the country sit in lobbies or lean against store fronts and talk cattle and rodeo in good solid Western drawls.

Everywhere there's hustle and hurry.

Yes sir, Exchange Avenue has come to life. The Stock Show's open. It's just saying the same thing in two different ways.

cana, and E. E. McQuillen, '20, College Station.

To be eligible for an award a student must show the committee a real financial need that he or his parents cannot solve, possess a grade point average of 1.5 or better, and present a financial budget that will carry him through the completion of his college course. Since only a limited number of the awards will be available their recipients will be chosen on a competitive basis by the committee. Interested students are invited to discuss the matter with any member of the committee or with the office of the Ex-Students association, Room 194, Administration building.

Students who have previously made loans through the ex-Student funds may continue on their present status. All new loans, however, will be considered only under the new Opportunity Award program.
