Architect Sophs Complete Building Of Scaled "Help Yourself" Laundry

Completion of a unique project in prefabricated demountable building construction has been accomplished by the sophomore Architecture class at A. & M. The project was a "help yourself" laundry unit for use in connection with prefabricated housing projects such as are now being erected at Orange and other cities in Texas.

"Help yourself" laundries are a rather new advance and are being seen in ever increasing numbers. In such a laundry housewives may take their clothes to the establishment and rent washing machines, doing the work themselves. Facilities are complete down to ironing boards, and the whole laundering operation may be performed at the laundry. In this way housewives who do not own washing machines or other means are enabled to do their washing without paying the cost of commercial laundering.

Work on this unit has been in progress since the start of the present semester. The class was organized into the departments of design, engineering and construction, and approached the problem from the viewpoint of a commercial architecture firm. Execution of the project was done by the class with no professorial help, but was carried out under the supervising eyes of the professor of sophomore architecture, who acted in an advisory capacity.

Panel construction was used in the erection of the project. In this type all walls, ceilings and partitions are built in sections, and thus may be put up much quicker than the regular type of construction. Another advantage of this kind of building is that it may be knocked down and transported to another location for erection there.

Another feature of the laundry project is the use of actual scale materials throughout. Construction was made to 1/4 scale, and every part of the unit conforms to the scale. The materials are also of the exact type which would be used in building a full-sized laundry. As a result the project is as near like the real thing as it can be made.

the trenches. Billy Conn, the gentleman so handy with the boxing gloves is the outstanding name in the story by Octavus Roy Cohen, "THE PITTSBURGH KID." It is the other half of the double feature attraction at the Campus today and tomorrow.

This is the story of a fighter who is torn between two loves, one a glamour girl, and the other, the daughter of his late manager. Eventually he makes the right choice.

Conn is acceptable in his first attempt on the screen, and the supporting cast is able to carry the story to a fairly successful conclusion.

Sunday afternoon the Ross Volunteers climaxed their annual festivities with an exhibition and competitive drill on the parade ground at 3:30 o'clock. This week-end also marks the first time in the history of the college that R. V.'s have been held during a regular school week-end.

The Concert Band played its second concert in two days Sunday afternoon at 4:30 in Guion Hall. Guest artist on the program was Cynthia Lancaster, harpist.

Sunday night parents went home to all parts of the nation, perhaps a little footsore and weary, but with fond memories of a big week-end spent with their sons at Aggie land.

By the time it would take to whip out your pipe and settle down into an easy chair, the bread is done and ready to be cooled and sliced. The bread slicer (and it's no slouch for brains) slices and wraps 1200 loaves an hour. Well, there's reviville. The bread must be toasted for breakfast so a new day begins.

State Health Department Asks People To Cooperate in Controlling Typhus

Typhus fever is fast developing into a serious health menace in Texas, according to Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State health officer, who issued an appeal for every Texan to cooperate in the prevention of this dread disease.

"Last year, the greatest number of cases in the history of the state were reported, when there was a total of 733 cases of typhus fever in Texas. While there were only 46 cases of typhus fever reported during the first twelve weeks of last year, during the same period of this present year, there have been 131 cases," Dr. Cox stated. "With the peak of this disease occurring in August, if the present trend is continued, we may expect serious conditions resulting from typhus by the end of summer."

The type of typhus fever occurring in Texas is known as endemic or Brill's disease, and is transmitted to human beings from infected rats, by means of the rat flea. The eradication of rats greatly reduces this health hazard, and a consistent program of rat poisoning, rat trapping, and rat proofing will materially aid in the control of typhus in Texas.

Dr. Cox stressed the fact that it is the patriotic duty of every Texan to cooperate in maintaining the highest possible health level, and the eradication of rats will promote the control of typhus among our civilian population as well as our armed forces.
