SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF NEW ELECTIVE COURSE

Many students who do not plan to work in technical agriculture have expressed a desire to learn something of the SOIL and its importance to our welfare.

There is also a need for some useful, but small and non-technical course to fill blanks in schedules too small for technical and laboratory courses.

Hoping to fill both these needs, the Curriculum Committee of the School of Agriculture has recently authorized:

Astronomy 328: General Soils, (2-0) 2 credits.

Tuesday and Thursday at 11—No prerequisites.

The course is designed for students majoring in Engineering, Arts and Sciences, Veterinary Medicine and also for those students in the School of Agriculture who do not now have a required soils course in their curriculum.

The course will deal in a popular manner with man's treatment of soils as a universal and irreplaceable natural resource. It will explain how the soil is used by man, how it is classified and modified by man and how the soil influences man's geographic environment, food supply and habits of life.

The text used was written last year by Dr. Charles E. Kellogg, Principal Soil Scientist, in charge of the Division of Soil Survey in the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

students in school, there were 1,174 different individuals who participated in intramurals with a total participation of 2,201. In 1940-41 with a total of 6,842 students, there were 4,278 different individuals participating with a total participation of 19,577. It may be seen that the intramural program has grown much more rapidly than the college enrollment.

Back in the early days of the intramural department "Penney" had to run the program with aid of only part-time student assistants as present regular staff was not organized until about 1936.

Penberthy will not allow himself to take all the credit for the success of A. & M.'s physical training programs. He lays the credit for the extremely successful program to his assistants "Spike" White, Dewey Hoke, Art Adamson, Nickey Ponthieux, Carl Tischler, Luke Harrison and Col. "Andy" Anderson. Incidentally, the two latter men are now on leave of absence as they are serving with the armed forces.

He also has much praise for the student departmental assistants and the recreational officers within the organization and says he has the best staff in the world. "The intramural program in itself would not have been a success without the whole-hearted cooperation of the student participants," says Penberthy.

"Penney" finds that the pleasure of his job is in working with the boys and watching them in keen, strong competition.

"I may have to be some place else someday but I just can't imagine myself being anywhere except in Aggieland," chuckled "Penney" fondly. Here's to "Penney"—a grand guy—may he be at A. & M. as long as he wishes and may that be forever!

fice. These hours count on your academic record.

During the past school year the Singing Cadets took three major trips. These included a trip to Houston, a two-day trip to Beaumont and other cities on the route of travel, and a final three-day tour to Dallas, Fort Worth, Denton and other cities. In addition the club sang at several banquets, a Town Hall program, the Parents' Day exercises and other activities on the campus and in Bryan. The final week of last semester the Singing Cadets went on a gala picnic, at which new officers were elected.

Officers elected were as follows: president, Tommy Collins; vice-president, Marion Lyle; business manager, Bernay Martin; publicity manager, Edwin Kingery; librarian, James Hill.

Activities contemplated for the present semester consist of a number of campus programs and social events with the matter of a trip an uncertainty because of present transportation problems. There is the possibility of a summer trip being arranged. See Richard Jenkins about joining the Singing Cadets, or ask any old member.

the Aggies present participated in so loud a demonstration of their patriotism that all former and future yell-practices were mere whispers in comparison.

According to Mr. Tigner, "It's a problem to figure out just what kind of pictures the boys like best. Of course, if it's got Grable in it, we know what'll happen, but it's the average pictures that we have trouble selecting."

Fraternity men and women smoke more than 2,500,000 cigarettes annually.
