Texas Experiments With Cork Growth

Cork oak acorns and seedlings are being planted by scientists of A. & M. as part of a long range program to test suitability of Texas soils to this foreign tree whose shortage is causing concern in parts of the government's re-armorment program.

The A. & M. project is being conducted in cooperation with the University of California, which furnished the cork oak seedlings and acorns.

Fifty seedlings are being planted on state forests in Newton and Cherokee counties and at the college, D. A. Anderson, research chief of the Texas Forest Service, said.

One hundred and fifty acorns were sown at the college by Dr. S. H. Yarnell, horticulture chief, of the Texas Experiment Station.

When the seedlings have sprouted they will be planted on experiment station farms and state forests in various sections of the state.

Cork is the outer layer of bark obtained from cork oak. It is used by the army to make gaskets and washers for engines, in airplanes, motor vehicles and tanks, for cartridge plugs and bomb parts, and for cold storage insulation.

The richest and most productive cork forests are in Portugal and Spain, but the tree also grows in southern France, Italy, Sardinia, Morocco, Algiers and Tunis, all within a restricted area along the coast of the western Mediterranean.

It is not native to the United States but has been successfully planted in California, and 248 trees from which part of the seed were gathered for the A. & M. College experiment, yielded more than 10,000 pounds of cork in 1940.

Officials of the Crown Cork and Seal Company of Baltimore, Maryland, tested this yield and said it "compared favorably with good grade imported cork."

Ex-Aggie Wins Wings In Naval Air Corps

Jerry Sam Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Scott of Frost, Texas, graduated today from the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi and was commissioned an ensign in the Naval Reserve.

Ensign Scott received his B.S. degree from A. & M., where he was a member of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers in 1941. Upon enlistment in the Naval Reserve, he was sent to the Aviation Elimination Base at Dallas for preliminary flight instruction.

Eighty-five per cent of Harvard students are "convinced that the United States was right in entering the war, and that it should concentrate all its energies in winning it," according to a recent poll.

Completion of the course brings eligibility for the C.P.T. cross-country and instructors' course, which in turn may lead to jobs as army instructors, Higgins announced.

HISTORY

This course, designed to teach the student fundamental concepts of American democracy, now includes a brief survey, at the request of the war department, of the war in Europe and Asia, and a comparison of democratic and Fascist principles of government.

The overflow in history enrollment has put a burden on the department, short-manned as usual during the summer. In fact, Dr. J. P. Abbott of the college's English department, has been "drafted" to teach history for a six-weeks period.

He will be replaced then by Dr. James H. Bass, regular department member now teaching a summer course at the University of Texas.
