Proper methods of handling incendiaries will be shown so that the householders may know what to do in case one lands in their house.

Two hours spent watching the demonstration and hearing the lecture will teach the wardens more in that brief time than they can learn otherwise, those who have attended previous demonstrations say.

As one of the climaxes of the demonstration a 10-pound thermite bomb will be "dropped" on the roof of a four-story frame apartment, which has been built on the grounds. In less than a minute the bomb burns through to the were detained and turned over to the Gestapo. 'You're prisoners of war,' Gestapo agents told them, and they were sent back to Bucharest under guard. At Bucharest Mrs. Brown was permitted to return home, under house arrest, and Brown was taken to the German secret police jail. There, after six days in solitary confinement, his ordeal really began.

"I was questioned and beaten the first night from 9:30 until 4:30 a. m.," he says. "I was stripped and hung to a rod by the wrists while the stool was pulled from under me. They kicked me in the kidneys and hit me. They said I could give them information about the work of our legation, and the Commission for Polish Relief? I hung there for 45 minutes. In pulling me down one of the guards twisted my wrist so that the bones cracked.

"I was pretty much of a wreck by the time they returned me to my cell. I had only black bread and watery soup during the next five days of my imprisonment."

"Intercession by the Rumanian prime minister procured Brown's release from the secret prison on Christmas Eve. Mrs. Brown was trimming a little tree, as a spiritual link with her husband, when he walked in. 'He had aged so much that I was frightened,' she says.

"The browns remained in their home, closely guarded, never sure of their safety, until the diplomatic train that was to take the staff of the American Legation out of Rumania was ready to leave on January 27th. The last night they passed at the legation. Colonel John R. Atty, American military attache in Bucharest, took them into his own compartment on the train to protect them from being kidnapped by the Gestapo at the Bulgarian border. A day later they reached Lisbon."

"Brown is a retiring, friendly, middle-aged little man, widely known and regarded in all Rumania for his welfare work. He is a native of Florence, S. C. Mrs. Brown is an attractive, blue-eyed blonde."
