Class of 1943 Continues Work of Guiding Corps in Various Publications, Activities

Cofor, Longley, Miller, Gordon Edit Student Publications; Chalmers Is Head Yell Leader; Stephens Is Social Secretary

The leadership of the student body for the coming school term will be in the hand of a certain group of students, whose responsibility it will be to guide the many activities of the corps. Most of these men have been elected by the student body at large, while some have been put in office by the senior class of '43. These men will head the corps for the 1942-43 school year: John Lawrence, Town Hall manager; John Longley, Editor of the Longhorn; Ed Gordon, Editor of the Engineer; Jack Miller, Editor of the Agriculturist; Brooks Cofor, Battalion Editor; Bobby Stephens, Social Secretary of the Senior Class; Ken Bresnen, Associate Editor of the Battalion; Chuck Chalmers, Head Yell Leader; Bob Haney, assistant yell leader; Reggie Smith, advertising manager of the Battalion; and Bill McKenzie and J. B. Booth, junior yell leader.

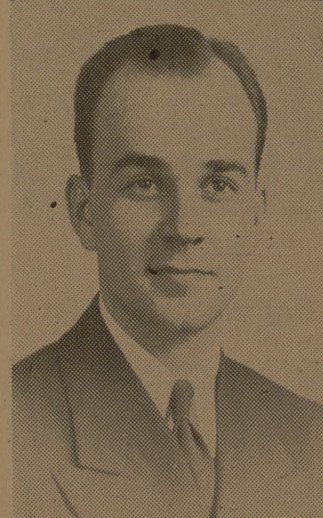

These men look to the corps for cooperation in the many activities which they represent. The success of the many student activities will depend upon the way in which these men perform their duties.

JACK MILLER
Jack Miller is the new editor of the Agriculturist magazine as he takes the place of Dave Pinson who resigned. Miller is a major on the Cavalry regimental staff, and won the Danforth scholarship his freshman year.

All but two of the American states, the District of Columbia, five outlying possessions and three foreign countries are represented by correspondence students of the University of Wisconsin.

Use of Technical Equipment Results In Officer Shortage

The increased use of electronic devices, communication apparatus and the complexity of the newer apparatus has produced a critical shortage of officers with sufficient training in these fields. The armed forces have been required to conduct long full time training programs for officers. This has produced serious delays in getting officers in the field after they have reported for service.

JOHN LONGLEY

The Longhorn, the college annual, will be edited by John Longley, AA major from Giddings. Longley served as junior editor of the staff on this year's Longhorn. The plan under the new speed-up program of the college is to have a Longhorn with each graduating class, that is for each class which was in school at the time of the change.

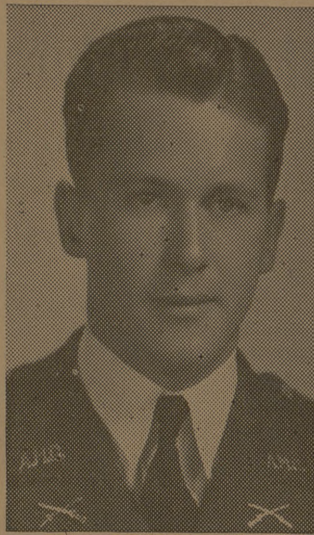

CHUCK CHALMERS

The leader of the famous Twelfth Man will be Chuck Chalmers from Houston. As senior yell leader Chalmers will direct the activity of the corps as it supports the Aggie athletic teams. Chalmers is an agricultural administration major and is a major on the corps staff for the coming year.

A conference was held at Massachusetts Institute of Technology the first of September, which Professor H. C. Dillingham of the Electrical Engineering department attended, to consider what the colleges might do to assist in giving increased training the electronic and communication arts with the view of providing more officers and reducing the full time service training. Representatives from seventy colleges, the Army, the Navy, and the U. S. Office of Education were present.

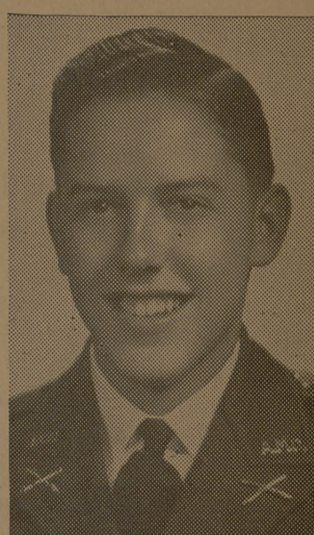

The conference laid out of a course of study very similar to the communication option in most engineering schools and urged that all qualified electrical engineering students take the new course. In order to fit this program in the Electrical Engineering curriculum here certain temporary changes have been made effective this coming term. These changes are principally a shifting of electives to required courses with minor modi-

Air Corps Needs More Experienced Workers

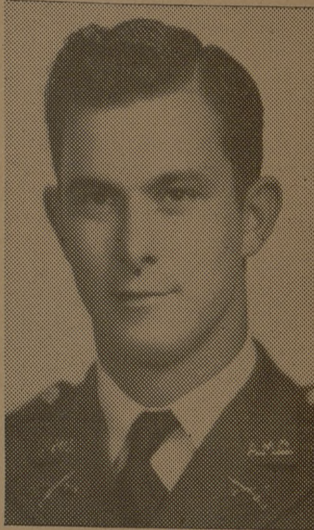

The Army Air Force needs more experienced technicians like Technical Sergeant F. T. Cook of Sherman, Texas.

An electrician before enlisting two years ago, Cook has designed and built an electrical and instrument test bench that reduces required testing and repair time from a day or more to less than an hour.

Using mostly salvage materials, Cook has installed on his 8 by 14 foot bench instruments which accurately check magnetos, generators, spark plugs, voltage regulators, coils, tachometers, also hydraulic systems, brakes and wheel assemblies.

Daniel M. Pearce, Jr., who recently was graduated from Harvard university with a degree in mechanical engineering, paid part of his tuition by performing as a clown at private parties.
