discuss anything with ease and restraint. He is however a shrewd man that neither drinks, smokes, nor likes women.

In a closing admonition, the Town Hall speaker said that even though we were losing ships, planes, and men, we are not losing them nearly as fast or in nearly so great quantities that our enemy, and we can definitely stand to lose a lot more before we are close to losing the fight.

Revolt Imminent in Italy

"The time is ripe now for revolting in Italy. The second front, in my opinion will come through Italy in the form of an attack, first on Sicily and Crete and then up through Italy, where I think we can count on the help of the Italian people, into Germany."

In a question period after the lecturer in which written questions were submitted to the speaker for answering, Kaltenborn assured the audience that in reply to a question about securing the Army-Navy "E" for excellence in production, he would certainly suggest that the "E" be awarded to A. & M. for production of officers for this year.

Advises Cadets to Remain Here

In an interview after the program, the widely traveled correspondent said that he had never seen anything like the size of this college. He said that in his opinion an officer graduating from this school is even better trained than one who has advanced through the ranks to become an officer. He further admonished cadets here to stay in school, and not to go wandering off, haphazardly, on the slightest rumor about various phases of enlistments.

LADIES' DAY, THE JEEP WAGONS—Vic McLaglen undoubtedly has a load of ladies, while Eddie Lowe is conveying what his Marine buddies refer to as "babes." It's a riotous comedy moment in RKO Radio's "Call Out the Marines," reuniting the famous feuding leathernecks of "What Price Glory" and "The Cockeyed World" in a streamlined story of the Service today, opening at the Campus Tuesday for two days. Prominently involved is blonde Binnie Barnes, with Paul Kelly, Robert Smith, Dorothy Lovett and Franklin Pangburn in important roles.

Draft Board Clerks Failing to Remind Registrants of Right to Appeal Cases

It has come to the attention of State Selective Service Headquarters, according to a directive from General J. Watt Page, state director, addressed to the various field agencies of the system, that clerks of certain local boards are failing to advise registrants of their right of appeal. "and, in some instances, have informed the registrant that he could not appeal or that it would do no good to appeal, or in other instances that he had no grounds for appeal."

The directive cites Sec. 603.71 of the Selective Service Regulations, which makes provision for an appeal agent for each local board, and stresses that it is the duty of the appeal agent not only to appeal from any local board classification which, in his opinion, should be reviewed by the board of appeal, but also to inform registrants of their legal rights and assist them in entering appeals where it appears that such persons are ignorant of the "when and how" of the appellate machinery.

General Page emphasized that "it is the duty of all clerks of local boards and all local board members to inform registrants that each local board has an appeal agent whose services are available to the registrant with respect to all matters involving an appeal or in which the registrant would need advice on Selective Service." Quoting further from General Page's directive: "I also have information that registrants have been advised by Selective Service personnel as to what they are 'sure' the action of the appeal board would be on their appeals, and, in some cases, that appeal boards always agree with local boards and that it would be useless to appeal. This is indeed regrettable and such statements should not be indulged in.

"Registrants should be informed of the name of the appeal agent for his local board and instructed how to contact him. The appeal agent occupies a most important position in the Selective Service System, and we all should recognize this fact in order that there may be proper functioning to the end that the fundamental rights will not be denied to registrants." General Page also cautioned local clerks against discourteous

International Students Day Is to Be Observed for Martyred Czech Scholars

International Students' Day will be observed on November 17 in colleges and universities throughout the world, it was announced today by Trude W. Pratt, General Secretary of International Student Service. The purpose of the day is to commemorate the closing of the Czech universities and the brutal murder of over 160 Czech students by the Nazis in Prague on November 17, 1939. At the same time observance of International Students' Day will manifest the determination of the free students of the world to fight through to victory.

Plans for International Students' Day are already far advanced, Mrs. Pratt said. The International Student Assembly, which met in Washington, D. C., from September 2 to 5, unanimously adopted a resolution calling on its 53 national affiliates to plan for suitable observances. United States colleges are planning convocations, chapel services and general meetings which will be addressed by educators, scholars-in-exile and students. A two minute period of silence at 11 a.m. will honor those who have lost their lives in the struggle for de-scheduled in England which will be carried to the United States by one of the major broadcasting systems. Many colleges and local stations will have broadcasts prepared by groups of students.

Students from every college in the New York metropolitan area are planning to hold a huge meeting in the Great Hall at Hunter College on the evening of Nov. 17. Many organizations are cooperating in planning the day. The Office of War Information has promised that reports of American observances will be broadcast by short-wave to all occupied countries. The Inter-Allied Information Service has prepared a pamphlet for distribution. American Youth for a Free World, a group recently organized by the Free World Association, is planning a series of meetings.

International Students' Day was first observed in England in 1940. Last year colleges in China, Cuba, Great Britain, India, the United States and South America participated in elaborate ceremonies.

Electronic Device Matches Shades To Accurate Degree

Through the work of such scientists as Virginia Granville, assistant color technologist at the Inter-chemical Corporation in New York City, milady of 1940 will be sure that her shoes match her suit, and that they will stay matched under any lighting condition. And she will have learned to say to the sales department, "Yes, they look like a match, but I want to be sure they match spectrophotometrically."

Mrs. Granville is not matching up fabrics and leathers now. Her laboratory is largely concerned with color work for defense purposes. After the war, she says, all they have learned will be useful for many pleasant peaceful purposes, including women's clothes.

She and Mr. Granville, who directs the laboratory, are using an electronic machine, called a photoelectric spectrophotometer, in their work. Produced by General Electric engineers, the electronic machine sees more accurately than any human eye, utilizing electrons to measure color wavelengths, and then recording its findings in the shape of a curve on a piece of graph paper. Using this curve rather than his eyes as a guide, a scientist can match colors exactly.

Mrs. Granville, who calls the electronic machine "Oscar," explains that it already is being used for cosmetics. "You can see how it would help match up lipstick and nail polish and how it keeps different batches of powder the same shade." She is looking forward to the day when she can tell the color curve she wants to use, for then she will be sure of the right shade on the living room walls.

Smouldering ruins of a factory; supplies for the armed forces burned to a crisp; or the home of an individual contain a very small amount of scrap material that will contribute to the war effort.

"Facts about wartime"

"I never saw a fighting man who didn't cherish the very thought of a pause with Coca-Cola. That goes for workers in factories, too. Ice-cold Coke is something more than the drink that answers thirst. It adds the feel of refreshment."
